State O.K.'s Richland as Soil District

Special Election to Be Conducted to Decide Conservation Plan.

The Ohio Soil Conservation committee today unanimously approved a petition presented yesterday by Richland county farmers to have the county designated as a soil conservation district.

At least 65 per cent of the rural landowners must now vote approval of establishment of an anti-erosion conservation district at a referendum and the matter be acted upon by the state committee before such a plant can be adopted. Date of the special election which will be held for the referendum vote has not yet been set.

Louis Bromfield, author and farmer, headed the Richland county farm delegation which met yesterday with the soil conservation group. Petitions had been presented last November, at which time a "steering committee" of four members had been named. They were: Arthur A. Mellick, Bloominggrove township; H. C. Snyder, Worthington township; Max Drake, Monroe township, and A. L. Lockhart, Troy township.

Besides Bromfield and the committee, other representatives of the county included: Vance Clever, Springfield township, M. E. Fisher, Jefferson township, D. T. Friday, vocational agriculture teacher at Butler and Bellville, Richard Arehart and Richard McFarland, Monroe township, and county farm administration leaders.

If the referendum vote is affirmative, the soil conservation committee must then decide whether the creation of such a district is practicable. With favorable action, the district then elects five supervisors and becomes a conservation corporation.

Ten soil conservation districts already exist in Ohio. They were established to fight erosion through contour farming, scientific planting and drainage systems. It is a cooperative undertaking, involving no financing.

"I would like to see such a district in Richland county and, for that matter, in every county in the state and nation," said Bromfield at the hearing. "The soil

TAKES OATH

Schettler Sworn In as New Municipal Judge.

Before members of his family and fellow members of the legal fraternity, Atty. Herbert H. Schettler this morning was sworn into the office of judge of Municipal court.

The oath was administered by his predecessor, Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch, who ascends to the Richland county common pleas court bench Feb. 9 after six years on the municipal seat. Judge Schettler has served as substitute judge and will be thoroughly familiar with his surroundings when he "takes over" the bench Monday morning.

Schettler was appointed to the post by Gov. John W. Bricker after Kalbfleisch signified his desire to leave the bench Jan. 30 for a brief rest before assuming his higher post.

President, 61 Today, Still Has Eye for Spectacular Surprises

Hair's Grayer, But He Remains In Very Good Health.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — President Roosevelt is 61 years old today and, as a sideline to directing America in its most titanic war, he still is setting precedents at a rapid pace.

That the passing of another year has not dimmed his eye for the dramatic and spectacular or made heavy inroads on his vigor was demonstrated by his epochal flight to Casablanca to chart 1943 war plans designed to force "unconditional surrender" on Germany, Italy and Japan.

Never before in war time had an American chief executive set foot on foreign soil, or conferred in their home lands with heads of other nations, as he did on the way back from Africa with Presidents Barclay of Liberia and Vargas of Brazil.

Time has left its mark on the man, of course. His hair is sparser and grayer and his face shows deeper seams. Yet the tremendous burdens of the presidency have taken relatively little toll of his health. And in the year just ended, he has been bothered with fewer of his recurrent colds than in some less strenuous years.

Today is the birthday of President Franklin D. Roosevelt. He is 61. This smiling caricature was drawn by orchestra leader Xavier Cugat.

For Mr. Roosevelt, the period between his sixtieth and sixty-first birthdays was perhaps as eventual as any in his career. It saw the development of the United Nations as the most formidable international union ever established.

Through all the turbulence of war, with its transfer of emphasis from domestic to international problems, the president has paced himself well. Always able to relax and put his cares temporarily aside, Mr. Roosevelt has found time for chats with old friends, and evenings at the White House for books, his stamp collection or movies.

Then, still energetic, he has worked day and night when the exigencies of the moment demanded it.

HELP CHINESE, SPEAKER'S PLEA

Y.W.C.A. Executive Says China Won't Give Up; Tells of Own Internment by Japs.

"China won't give up the fight," Miss Marion Dudley, a returned Y. W. C. A. executive from South China, assured an audience of 265 persons here last night when speaking at the annual dinner of the Young Women's Christian Association in Park Avenue Baptist church.

"But," said the executive who saw Japanese bombs rain death on Hongkong, "it's up to us to give, give and give to China, the ally who has stood between us and the Japs." Medical supplies, anaesthetics, bandages and more money for her armies are among the things China sorely needs, the speaker said.

"Don't think of the Chinese as a sad people to lift up," urged Miss Dudley, a worker in China six years. "Think of them in terms of admiration, equality and justice."

"When we win the war and we will win it," asserted the speaker, "we will need China at the peace table, for she can teach us how to live with the Japs. We don't understand the Japanese psychology like China does. She can tell us what to do."

The executive who returned to the states last autumn on the exchange ship, Gripsholm, after more than six months in the Stanley internment camp, described life at the camp with its population of 3,000 Americans,

'Two Laughs a Minute' Talk Given Senior High Graduates

Witnessing a different type of commencement address last night, the 96th graduating class of Mansfield Senior high school, and parents and friends of the graduates heard Charles Newcomb, Delaware humorist and lecturer, present a talk, parts of which averaged "two laughs a minute," in keeping with the speaker's reputation.

Choosing "How to Be Happy Though Educated" for his address to the 85 students in the final mid-year graduating class, Newcomb called "an educated man one who is not embarrassed in the presence of a new idea and can do a job he has never done before."

To answer the questions, "What constitutes happiness and what is education?" the speaker used as examples a series of ancedotes which kept his audience in continuous laughter. "Happiness in an individual is a feeling which accompanies the expansion of his personality," he stated. Using three circles which were to comprise happiness he named them work, play and love life.

"No man can be happy until he has found his right work and then he must have the proper attitude toward it no matter what type of worthy occupation he chooses. After hours, there must be play—some form of recreation. These circles are then completed by love life which every person must have.

"But for complete happiness, something is missing, a thing which encompasses the other three circles, which we'll call man's philosophical and religious life. No man gets any bigger than this

Raps Liquor Sale To Minors; 3 Boys Face Drunk Charge

When a 19-year-old boy appeared in municipal court this morning to answer an intoxication charge, saloon keepers drew a sharp warning to be more cautious in curbing sales to minors.

Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch, in his final session on the municipal bench, rebuked the youth for his conduct and deplored the fact that under-age boys are able to obtain intoxicants from unscrupulous bartenders. The boy was fined $5 and costs.

When Police Captain Paul Whipp and Lieut. E. E. Hartnell saw three youths staggering around the intersection of Fifth and Main streets last midnight the trio were taken into custody. The boys told the officers they had purchased beer and wine at an East Fifth street resort.

Police continued an investigation today of the alleged illegal sale of alcoholic beverages to minors while two of the youths were sent to the juvenile court branch of probate court for disposition of their cases, the third being the one fined.

PURSUE AXIS OVER BORDER OF TUNISIA

British Advance as Russians Take 40 More Towns West of Voronezh.

LORIENT BOMBED AGAIN

Allies Chase Japs In Area Around Salamaua On New Guinea.

(By Associated Press)

British Eighth army vanguards moved into Tunisia today in remorseless pursuit of Marshal Rommel while the great Red armies of Russia enveloped 40 more towns west of Voronezh in an offensive consuming Hitler's waning manpower.

Allied successes in Russia and on the rim of Europe in North Africa combined to make a melancholy backdrop for the tenth anniversary of Hitler's rise to power in Germany.

It was ten years ago that bewildered old President Paul von Hindenburg turned over the chancellory to the brown shirted politician. The German people were sowing the wind; today they were reaping the whirlwind.

It was fat Reichsmarshal Herman Goering's task to explain the German calamity in Russia and announce the mobilization of Germany's last resources.

The Stalingrad debacle where 220,000 of Hitler's finest troops were slaughtered or captured, was a masterstroke insuring German victory, Goering shouted. Russia, he said, "is losing her last reserves."

The British move across the Tunisian frontier completed the conquest of Libya, last bit of Mussolini's expensively won African empire, and tightened the narrow pocket in which Rommel's refugees and the expeditionary force of Col. Gen. von Armin is holding against two British and one U. S. army, besides the 80,000 or more French troops of Gen. Henri Girard.

The magnificent army of Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery passed the battered port of Zuara, 65 miles west of the Libyan capital

HIT BY SLUGGER

East Mansfielder Accosted In Car by Masked Man.

Slugged by a masked bandit while seated in his parked car near East Fifth and Elm streets last night, John Miller, East Mansfield, was robbed of a purse containing $20 and valuable papers, he told Patrolmen Floyd Bowers and Earl Korn.

Miller was taken to police headquarters where a severe abrasion on the left side of his head was treated, and then assisted to his home.

The bandit had a colored handkerchief tied over his face below his eyes, Miller told police, but seemed to be a man in his early 20s and fairly well dressed. Miller said he was parked near the intersection waiting for a girl friend employed in a war plant in that area.

Bombs Rain on Nazi Capital For Full Hour

London Hears Explosions on Airwaves Meant to Carry Air Marshal's 10th Anniversary Talk; Germans Told Russians Camouflaged Power.

BULLETIN

LONDON—(AP)—Adolf Hitler told the German people in a proclamation on the tenth anniversary today of his rise to power that they must win the war or be enslaved by Bolshevists. In the fuehrer's absence, Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels read the address before an audience of 10,000 persons at the Sports Palast.

(By Associated Press)

LONDON — British Mosquito bombers swept across Germany and poured explosives on Berlin today to delay for a tumultuous hour an anniversary address in which Air Marshal Hermann Goering promised ultimate victory for the German people.

Timing its first daylight assault of the war on the Nazi capital to coincide with the tenth anniversary of Adolf Hitler's accession to power, the RAF struck its target precisely at 11 a. m., when Goering was supposed to start his speech.

A Nazi radio announcer said the fuehrer himself was "with his soldiers."

The British air ministry said the swift Mosquito bombers, Britain's newest type in action, returned safely from their hazardous expedition 400 miles into hostile territory.

During the delay of an hour in the start of Goering's address, radio listeners heard muffled shouts and explosion-like noises, that could have been caused by the British bombers. Goering spoke in the air ministry building, which is the center of Berlin's business district.

A few minutes after the raiders evidently had passed, Goering, who once promised the German people that British bombers never would cross their frontiers, began his address. He said the British air force would be repaid "one day."

During the long interval before the start of Goering's speech, the announcer kept saying at frequent intervals: "There will be a few more minutes' delay in Marshal Goering's speech." At least one loud "bang" was clearly audible to London radio listeners, who had received no previous hint the RAF was raiding the capital.

The streets were unadorned with flags, and it was a somber day in the Nazi capital even before the bombs began to fall from the winter sky.

The RAF chose its fastest light bomber for today's spectacular

Official word of the young flier's death did not reach the parents until 7:30 p. m. Friday although newspaper dispatches carried the story yesterday afternoon.

Cadet Ness was stationed at the La Junto air base and was making a cross-country night flight with Cadet Lewis Newman of Weirton, W. Va., when their twin-motored bomber

WILL FIGHT IT

Neffner to Take Ouster to Courts If Necessary.

COLUMBUS (AP) — George H. Neffner said today he would go to the courts "if necessary" to retain his position as election expert and statistician in the secretary of state's office.

Edward J. Hummel, who became secretary of state Jan 11, Thursday ordered Neffner removed as of noon today from a position he has held 16 years.

Neffner said his decision to contest the removal was based on three facts: "First, I naturally would like to retain the position," he explained. "Second, there is a principle involved that is of definite interest to every civil service employe in the state of Ohio. Third, I am a member of the Republican party which always stood for efficiency in office and always has been a supporter of the civil service laws."

U. S. Agencies Will Use Own Time If Ohio Changes Clocks

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS - The federal government washed its hands today of the time-change controversy in Ohio.

An interstate commerce commission official said in Washington that interstate commerce and federal agencies would conform to war time as set by congress regardless of whether Ohio legislators voted to set clocks back an hour.

The official, who declined use of his name, said the ICC's policy would be followed in any state which enacted a time-change law. Georgia and Michigan already have passed such measures and Ohio lawmakers will vote on a similar proposal next week.

Gov. John W. Bricker and legislative leaders had expressed hope that federal agencies would change their schedules to conform if Ohio reverted to the central time zone.

In Georgia, where the time change already is effective, officials said few people knew what time it was.

Michigan shifts to central war time Feb. 15, but officials of several cities, including Detroit and Lansing, indicated they would remain on their present time.

Throughout the entire affair in the three states the federal government has maintained its previously stated policy which, in effect, is:

"You take your time and we'll take ours."

BROADWAY

You Meet Interesting People.

(And it's the little things that fascinate you!)

Greta Garbo is a rumba fan—has been ever since Bob Alton taught her to snake her hips to a Latin tune in "Two Faced Woman." She owns a disc collection that includes almost every rumba record ever made, and her idea of a really big evening is having a few friends in for dinner and playing all of them . . . Margaret Hayes who always plays the hard-boiled "other woman" on the screen, is really a thorough sentimentalist. She writes the gushiest poetry you've ever read?

Kilgallen

Greer Garson is a gal who rushes in where other redheads are terrified to tread, she loves wearing shocking colors, and the predominant note in her California home is pink — bright, bright pink—throughout . . . Every afternoon at five Jeannette MacDonald draws the blinds in her boudoir and emulates Sleeping Beauty for exactly an hour.

Carmen Amaya, who is such a vivid and volcanic personality on the floor at LaConga, and who seems so shy and self-conscious when you meet her personally, does flamenco dancing just for a living. When she wants to relax she hot foots it up to the Savoy Ballroom in Harlem for a touch of jive . . . Ingrid Bergman avoids heels religiously—on her slippers, I mean. She's addicted to flatties because of her stately stature . . . Ginger Rogers may have her own soda fountain, but both Ann Rutherford and Glenda Farrell own their own hair-drying machines. They like to give themselves fingerwaves, and are quite accomplished at the difficult art.

Al Jolson is a "curbstone driver." He yells remonstrations to taxi drivers whizzing by if he finds fauld with their method of motoring . . . George Jean Nathan's pet aversion is women with slick coiffures. He thinks girls must have a slightly windblown appearance to be really attractive . . . Frances Farmer, in the days when she was on Broadway and in pictures, was so cautious about maintaining her dignity that she once threw a local radio program into an uproar by refusing, at the eleventh hour, to go through with an interview—because the script was "too flippant" . . . Ted Straeter improvises picture frames by painting cake tins, gluing photographs right in the center of them, and hanging them around the walls of his apartment. (Try it!)

Morton Downey never wears a hat. He says it's because he got his first singing job when he was hatless, and he's felt superstitious about it ever since . . . Max Gordon likes to sit in the senate visitors' gallery in Washington and listen to our legislators in action . . . Vincent Sardi is so fond of actors that he steadfastly refuses to enlarge the tiny bar in his restaurant even though that would mean more money in the cash register. He thinks a big comfortable bar would encourage his patrons (most of whom are in the theater) to drink more, and he doesn't like to see actors drunk . . . Vicki, the girl bandleader at the Coq Rouge, has all her evening gowns designed with the elaborate detail and decoration on the back—because that's the side she turns to the crowd all night.

Tallulah Bankhead is in awe of just one female in this world—and that's Ethel Barrymore. She regards her as queen of the theater, and frequently greets her by kissing her hand. George Jessel has a mailing list at a local bookstore. Every time he finishes a book that he likes, he calls the shop and has copies sent to all his friends on the list.

HOLLYWOOD

—By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD — Hereafter, we will please think of him as the terrible-tempered Mr. Meek, Mr. Donald Meek of the righteous wrath and the radiant roses.

For nine years Mr. Meek, mild and little and bald, has been popping in and out of scripts to your delight and mine. He plays long roles too, but I remember him most fondly when he scurries unexpectedly onto the screen, like some strange woodland gnome from behind a rock, and paints a quick character portrait. These are what he calls three-minute roles, like the little nut in "They Got Me Covered" or the hobo on the park bench in "Come Live With Me."

Coons

Mr. Meek has notable acting specialties. He is the timid mouse of a man, nourished on milk toast. And he is the heartless skinflint who persecutes widows and orphans and forecloses mortgages.

But Mr. Meek is not meek. He is a very precise, well-brushed, neat little gentleman with a scholarly anger. Its object is the harsh treatment given, too frequently, to young men and women who are first offenders against the law.

Forty years ago Mr. Meek, then a young actor, was sitting with his friend Jack London when a lad, fresh out of jail, told them his story; he had stolen from his employer to buy fine clothes, he had served time, now he was forever disgraced, could find no character reference. Mr. Meek took a chance, gave the boy a letter, and has since reaped the reward of seeing a "blasted life" restored to usefulness.

"This boy had slipped," says Mr. Meek, who ever since has been doing research on the problem of the first offender.

Being a thorough soul, Mr. Meek has been collecting notes from his readings and observations on crime, and he intends to write a book—if he may be so bold—when he considers he has consulted all expert authority. After 40 years, he still is sure he hasn't exhausted the sources.

Mild Mr. Meek, whose other hobby is rose culture, was also an acrobat once, and he has soldiered twice—in the Spanish-American war and in World war I.

In the Spanish war he lost his heavy hair to tropical fever, returning as bald as he is today. At 18, he began playing romantic roles under a toupee—and some years later threw the thing away and espoused character parts with relief. He has been acting for 53 years.

RITES SUNDAY

Her son, Lloyd, and six grandchildren survive.

FEARS PEACH CROP HIT

COLUMBUS —(AP)— Ohio's peach trees severely damaged by the recent cold weather may yield only half of normal this fall, says Norman F. Childers of the Ohio State university forestry department. He estimated 95 per cent of the school's orchard would not yield fruit.

ODDS INCREASE AGAINST O.K. FOR E. FLYNN

Result of Vote Still Doubted As Senators Hint at Withdrawal of Name.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—The odds today shifted against senate confirmation of the nomination of Edward J. Flynn for the post of minister to Australia although the result was admittedly in doubt on the basis of senate polls.

Sen. Connally (D.), Texas, chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, said that he expects to open debate on the Flynn nomination Monday, but some Democratic senators said that there is a strong possibility that Flynn will ask President Roosevelt to withdraw his name.

An influential Democratic senator, who has not yet announced how he will vote, privately said that "Flynn definitely is beaten."

Administration leaders conceded that they face a real battle to gain confirmation of the former Democratic national chairman and New York political leader, but expressed hope that the crucial votes will fall their way.

Sen. Byrd (D.), Va., announced that he will vote against Flynn, thus bringing to five the number of Democrats publicly stating that they will join with Republicans in voting to reject Mr. Roosevelt's personal choice for the southwest Pacific diplomatic post.

Sponsors of Flynn claimed the vote of Sen. Russell (D.), Ga., whose colleague, Sen. George, voted against reporting Flynn's name favorably from the foreign relations committee.

Sen. "Cotton Ed" Smith (D) S. C., who has been ill at his home as a result of a fall, sent word that he would return for the Flynn vote, and foes of Flynn counted him with the oppositoin. Sen. Reed (R.) Kan., also was returning from a western trip for the vote.

Sen. McKellar (D) Tenn., a key doubtful vote, said that he may announce today his stand on Flynn. Edward Crump, so-called political "boss" of Memphis and a close friend of McKellar, was authoritatively reported to be opposing Flynn.

BRICKER HITS ISOLATIONISM

Quotes M'Kinley on Policy After Taft Promotes Him For President:

(By Associated Press)

NILES, O.—Drawing upon the beliefs of the late William McKinley as evidence that America cannot remain isolated, Gov. John W. Bricker today stood opposed to aloofness in world affairs.

Ohio's third-term Republican governor, himself pictured in an earlier address by Sen. Robert A. Taft as another McKinley whose re-election was "the forerunner of a return of Republican control in Washington," was the principal speaker at the centennial anniversary banquet honoring the martyred president at his birthplace here.

Bricker, in his address lauding McKinley, did not refer to remarks by Taft retiterating the latter's endorsement of the governor as a possible presidential candidate.

Instead, he referred to McKinley's foreign policy and belief that "isolatiopism is no longer possible or desirable."

Bricker declared that in order to help others, America must "stay strong and keep free," and referring again to McKinley, added:

"He was a prophet of an age yet to be. He believed we could preserve our free system of government and destroy the evil in it. The closer community of the world has multiplied points of friction but McKinley believed that free government can meet and solve the new problems."

McKinley, the governor declared, was the first American chief executive "to heed the call of downtrodden peoples and reach out the helping hand of America. He said isolationism was no longer possible or desirable. He realized that America's responsibility to the remainder of the world would become heavier and heavier."

TAKES OVER NEW CUBBING DUTIES

At the meeting of Pack 2 in the Central Methodist church last evening, Fred Troll, deputy commissioner in charge of cubbing, resigned as cubmaster in order to take over duties of Paul Snyder, cubbing commissioner, who is now active as chief messenger in civilian defense.

Howard Stauffer was inducted as a new cubmaster and Troll was presented with a farewell gift by Dave Stanton, keeper of the buckskin of Den 2, who represented the entire pack. Den chiefs receiving the lanyard were Dave Rondell, scout from Troop 6, Joe Hess and Robert Troll, of Troop 16.

Service stars for a year's service were awarded to Roy Farmer, Donald Hart and James Dickson. Fred Stalhaber was welcomed as a new member. Advancement awards were presented to: Al Snyder, Wolf gold arrow; Dave Oswalt, Dick Rakestraw, webelos; Gordon Henry, Lion badge and gold arrow; Phil Bolin and James Brown, Wolf badge.

HEALTH OFFICIALS TO CHECK ON SHELBY TRAILER LOCATIONS

Acting on the assumption that construction of the Army Air Force Supply depot near Shelby will bring trailer camps into the Richland county area, the state health department today advised Dr. W. B. Wild, city-county health commissioner, of approved regulations for such residence sites.

Dr. Wild explained that in Shelby any such development will be under the supervision of Dr. B. H. Moffat, resident health commissioner, and that the depot area will be strictly within the scope of federal authorities.

Officers of the U. S. engineer corps last summer conferred with the health commissioner on all phases of sanitary conditions in the Richland area.

According to the state department three tents of structures comprise a camp site coming within the scope of regulations, whether movable or stationary, or pertaining to recreational, health, educational, sectarian, tourist, picnic or resort purposes.

Specifications include drainage requirements, adaquate water supply, toilet facilities, refusal disposal and construction methods. All persons contemplating trailer camp residence are urged by Wild to contact some established health department office.

KING APPOINTED

Becomes 'Committee of One' To Check Food Supply.

Homer King, assistant manager of the Central Fruit and Grocery company who is a member of the state committee of the Food Distribution administration, has been named a "committee of one" to investigate shortages of foodstuff in Richland county.

It is the aim of the distribution administration to alleviate shortages by organizations in every county which can shift supply of commodities to places where the needs exist, King said. Some complaints may be corrected locally while others will depend on cooperation of outside units. Shortages will not be considered critical if any substitutes are available.

Organizations have been undertaken first in the more critical areas of the state that already have experienced acute shortages. In order that these units can function properly, appointment of committees in each of the counties became necessary, even if further organization has not yet been worked out in such counties.

The help shortage struck the women of Park Avenue Baptist church serving the Y. W. C. A. annual dinner last night but the workers didn't get flustered by the fact they had 265 persons to serve and not enough regulars to assist them. They simply did the next best thing—they drafted aid on sight—and among the selectees were John Daup, the church janitor, and several young sons of the congregation. The masculine element rose nobly to the occasion and if this contingent felt that waiting table was just a little out of their line they didn't show it.

According to co-workers, the face of Howard Miller, city fireman at No. 4 engine house, got very red when he reached his home at 199 West First street, this morning. While Miller was enjoying "cat-naps" in the quiet of his station last night, undisturbed by the pinochle and hearts being played by fellow firemen, his home was ablaze. Central station firemen under Captain L. R. Zimmerman were called to the Miller home at 11 p. m., when sparks from a chimney ignited the roof. Damage was confined to a gaping hole burned in the over-structure.

43 PER CENT OF SYNTHETIC PROGRAM OK'D

Roosevelt Backs Plan For 452,000-Ton Output Annually, Report.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — The zealous efforts of a hard-hitting outspoken railroad man—Rubber Director William M. Jeffers—paid dividends today as the nation's synthetic rubber program moved out of the war production "dog house."

Drafted from the Union Pacific to tackle the job of keeping the country on rubber, Jeffers was in a fair way doing just that with 43.6 per cent of his huge 1,037,000 ton program given a "go ahead" over competing phases of the war effort.

A decision, reportedly handed down directly from President Roosevelt, provides the rubber director with an armful of high priority ratings that will enable him to speed to immediate completion plants for producing 452,000 tons of synthetic rubber annually.

On that portion of his program, at least, Jeffers will be assured first call on valves, heat exchangers and other critical component parts for which the nation's high octane gasoline, airplane and escort vessel programs also compete.

Army and navy warnings against serious impairment of these latter vital undertakings blocked Jeffers' attempt to secure priority approval for an even higher percentage of the synthetic program mapped out of the Baruch rubber investigating committee last autumn.

Asked if he was satisfied with being given the smaller percentage, Jeffers said that "you don't get everything you want in this world," and added that "I came down here to get the rubber program through and I am going to get the rubber program through, come hell or high water, and you can quote me on that." He said that he was going to see that the decision doesn't "wreck" his program.

WPB Chairman Donald M. Nelson, who publicly sided with Jeffers' campaign to prevent exhaustion of the country's rubber stockpile and a breakdown in transportation, formally issued the directive designed to stimulate the synthetic program, already six weeks behind schedule.

Last December, Jeffers had received a "go-ahead" on plants to produce 97,000 tons of synthetic rubber annually, while plants now nearing completion without benefit of any specific directive will produce 145,000 tons. The new order gives impetus to an additional 210,000.

"When I was a boy, I was made to go to church three times on Sunday, and so now . . ." is sometimes heard from the non-churchgoers, spoken so audaciously, as if such vindication were justifiable.

In a well regulated home, children are taught in an effective way the meaning of the church as a sacred institution offering the needed religious privileges that must not be denied any child. Any condemnation of the home should fall on the parents who permit their children to grow up without the needed moral background that makes for character. Investigations by juvenile courts have proved that the vast majority of delinquents come from homes without a religious program.

It is probable that the one who makes the above excuse ought to have had the early childhood program continued a little longer. The habit of church attendance would have been as normal as the habit of eating three times a day is normal. Who ever heard of an adult refusing to eat because he had been made to eat three times a day when a child. WHY NOT GO TO CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY?—D. Carl Yoder.

World Religious News

From almost every American city there comes the word of increasing crime among juveniles, as a result of war conditions. Children whose parents are engaged in defense industries are getting into trouble because of the lack of supervision. In some cities the increase has been sharp and social workers are genuinely alarmed over the prospect.

Governor Harold E. Stassen of Wisconsin has been elected president of the International Council of Religious Education. This organization is composed of forty denominations and represents 90% of the Protestant churches of America.

At least 50 American colleges have closed their doors during the last few months, and scores of others face the imminent possibility of being closed, as a result of financial difficulties arising out of war conditions. A survey conducted by the United States Office of Education has disclosed the fact that ninety-three per cent of the young men attending colleges are eighteen years old, or older, and thus eligible for military service under the new draft act.

In August church attendance in the army totaled 3,638,060, although 66 reports had not yet been received. There were 62,911 services, the larger proportion of them being out-of-doors. There were 3,851 marriages and 758 babies were baptized. 48,646 were visited by the chaplains in the hospitals and guardhouses. 222,032 Testaments and Bibles were given to soldiers who asked for them. 1,356 soldiers made profession of faith, and many of these were baptized. 3,150,880 soldiers consulted with their chaplains on matters of pastoral and personal nature. This includes military reservations only, and does not include field operations.

The opening of the second front in North Africa is to result in a larger supply of food to Greece. The neutral commission which is supervising the distribution of food in that starving country announced on Nov. 17 that the governments of the United States and Great Britain have agreed "provisionally" to send 100 tons of powdered milk monthly to Greece. It was reported in the British parliament that wheat send to Greece has arrived. It had "been distributed without interference from the occupying authorities." Many thousands of people have already starved in Greece. This country has felt the worst effects of the war in having been the scene of battle and in having its food supplies cut off.

Time is canned life. If you earn ten dollars a day, that money represents one day of your life. To misuse or misspend what one earns is a short cut of homicide or suicide. When a son misspends ten dollars his father has given him, his action is the equivalent of a slap in the face. If we misuse what God, our Father, has entrusted to us, we commit a sin.

Mansfield News-Journal
AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER
MANSFIELD, OHIO, SATURDAY, JANUARY 30, 1943.

Drive carefully tomorrow—and don't forget to have your tires and battery checked.

A survey indicates that there will be no great rush to exchange places with the boys on Guadalcanal, despite Eddie Rickenbacker's suggested experiment.

Russians assure German invaders that "real winter" has not yet started—so sub-zero temperature over there may be similar to what we call Indian summer.

War Chest Shared In Russian Relief

TANGIBLE evidence of the desirability of centralizing relief contributions in a Community War Chest, as is done in Mansfield and Richland county, is seen in the just-issued report of one relief organization to which the people of this city and county made generous contribution, through their War Chest, without need for a separate campaign.

This is Russian War Relief, to which Americans subscribed more than $9,000,000 in 1942, or 50 per cent in excess of the goal of $6,000,000.

This fund was apportioned $3,691 out of the Mansfield and Richland county War Chest, which is a fair share of the national total and which would have undoubtedly been raised by a campaign of its own had it not been a part of the general War Chest fund.

Contributions from Americans to Russians, during this time of stress, serves as fitting recognition of the gallant fight being made in that country against a common enemy, and also expresses the humanitarian spirit of Americans toward all distressed victims of Axis aggression.

A number of other international relief agencies are included in the local War Chest roster of beneficiaries, in addition to continued support of essential community welfare and character-building agencies.

Contributors to the War Chest have the satisfaction of knowing that a part of their money goes into the national Russian War Relief fund, and that parts of it will be distributed equably among a number of other approved war relief organizations—so that by giving once they gave to all.

Expression of Views Invited

CONGRESSMEN are naturally interested in learning the views of the American people in general, and more particularly of residents of the district they represent.

Congressman McGregor, of this district, is using a questionnaire to get an expression of views from a thousand or more of his constituents on subjects now engaging public attention.

While it would be impracticable for a mailing list to include everyone in the district, there would be no objection, of course, to expression of opinions by persons who did not receive one of the questionnaires.

The questions which Mr. McGregor asks are as follows:

"Do you think we are jeopardizing our 'over-all' war effort by continuing to draw manpower from our farms and industries in order to build up our armed forces?

"Do you favor a selective service moratorium?

"Do you favor legislation prohibiting strikes during the emergency?

"Do you favor mandatory regimentation of labor?

"Do you favor registration of all women?

"Should overtime be paid after 40 hours? After 48 hours?

"Do you favor a pay-as-you-go tax plan?

"Do you favor a federal sales tax?

"Should all reciprocal trade agreements be submitted to congress for approval?"

These questions touch on subject of lively public interest, with direct bearing on the national war effort.

An expression of individual views is desirable. Address: "Hon. J. Harry McGregor, M. C., House Office Building, Washington, D. C."

Where Are They Now?

FORMER Mansfield residents—many of them native sons—are now scattered in many parts of this country . . . and all over the world.

Where they are, and what they are doing, is always a matter of interest to friends and acquaintances—as in the instance of George Seybold, who rather surprisingly bobbed up in the news yesterday as manager of a big rubber plantation in Liberia, and as escort for President Roosevelt's party during a visit to plantations and native villages.

Where are some of the former Mansfield "boys" who left the home town, possibly a number of years ago, and found employment or a career elsewhere?

The News-Journal will appreciate hearing from them—or receiving this information from relatives or friends—including family connection, Mansfield schooling and work, and present position and address. Please give information in writing, as greater accuracy is thus assured.

Preparing Germans for Defeat

THE NAZI PRESS is not so truculent as it has been. It is breaking it gently to the German people that bad news is on the way.

For a long time German newspapers assumed that nothing really bad could possibly happen to the folk under the fuehrer. If ever a people started out with an "It Can't Happen Here" philosophy, it was the Germans. It was their belief that their army was invincible, that their cities could not be bombed, and that blitzkrieg was the only way of war.

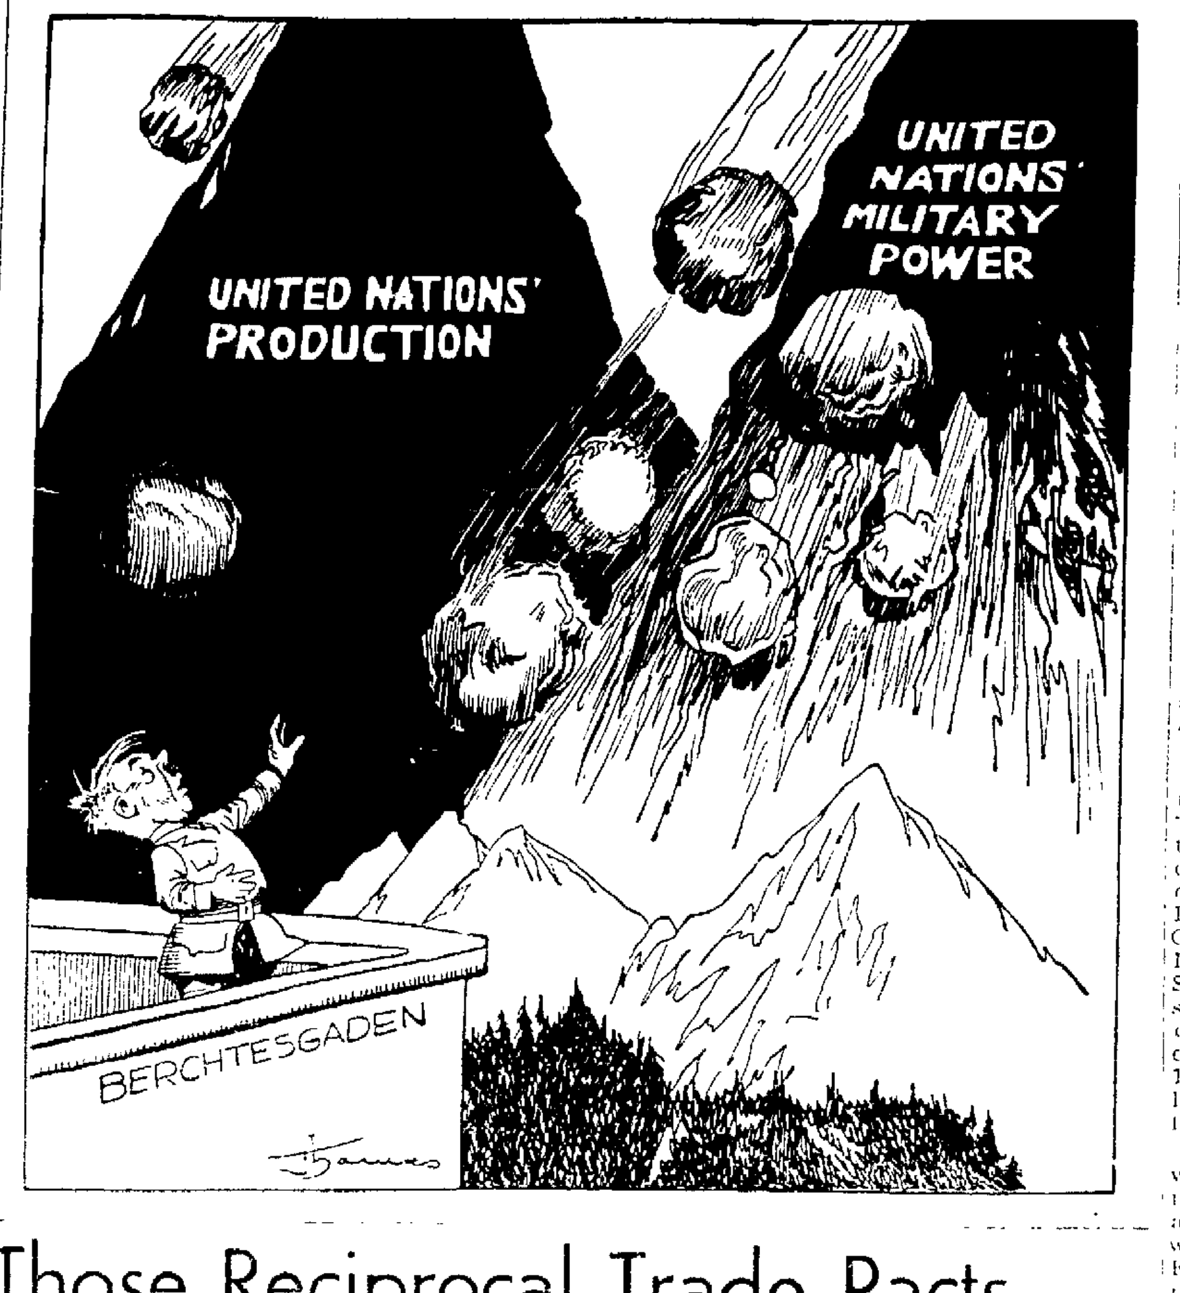
First the British, then the Russians proved their theories mistaken. Now the Americans are coming along in numbers to finish the job. And the fuehrer is frightened. His generals have told him some of the facts of life, but until lately he found it easier to throw out the generals than to believe them.

The inevitability of the Russian advance; the renewed powers of the British and the reinforcements of men and material pouring in from across the Atlantic can no longer be denied. The change in propaganda policy is only one of the signs of what is coming to Germany—and coming faster, perhaps, than any of them can believe.

With the ban on pleasure driving of automobiles, some horse-drawn vehicles are being used to reach night spots in the east—and it's a consoling thought that in the old days the horse could usually find its way home.

A noted sociologist confidently asserts that only two per cent of Americans are morons—which seems to clear a number of suspects.

NEW MOUNTAINS



Those Reciprocal Trade Pacts

—By HERMAN ALLEN

WASHINGTON—One of the bitterest fights coming up in the new congress is sure to be over the proposal to give the administration permission to renew the reciprocal trade pacts the United States has signed with 25 nations.

The authority, first granted in 1934, and renewed in 1937 and 1940, now must be granted again for another three years if Secretary of State Hull is to continue spinning the world-wide commercial web which he began in the hope that it would keep the world at peace.

As a building block in history, the pacts fit into the traditional Democratic party principle of low tariffs. The party in the past drew its greatest membership from the agricultural South. The South shipped its cotton, principally, to England. There it was made into cloth, some of which came back to this country. England sent many other varieties of manufactured goods here. The South, which bought these goods, naturally didn't want them to be subjected to a tariff which would raise the price in the store.

The industrial North, in the main, was represented by the Republican party. The North, which also manufactured cotton goods, wanted a tariff on British cotton goods so that it could compete more favorably. It wanted a tariff on all manufactured imports, in fact.

In 1931, as is well known, and right up to this term of congress—there weren't very many Republicans on Capitol Hill. So Secretary Hull's proposals found a ready welcome. At present the pacts cover some 60 per cent of America's normal foreign trade.

HERE'S how reciprocal trade agreements are set up:

U. S. representatives approach those of the other country and tell them, in effect, "Look, we'll reduce a few tariffs or throw them out entirely—and you reduce a few. That way, our people can get your goods cheaper and yours can get our goods cheaper."

So they wade through heaps of import and export figures and come out with a list of tariff cuts. In the case of the treaties with Canada and the United Kingdom there were hundreds of individual items.

Then—and this is a most important part of the Hull plan—the U. S. representatives insist on this provision: that both countries share the privilege of the reduced tariffs with any other country not discriminating commercially against them.

This is called the "most favored nation" policy. Before the war Germany was the only country with which the U. S. refused to sign a reciprocal agreement. The Nazis insisted on "bilateral" agreements under which commerce between the two countries would balance. This was their famous barter system, under which Czechoslovakia got aspirin tablets in return, for machine guns.

Opposition to the pacts since 1934 has not stuck particularly to party lines, but rather has reflected sectional and industrial interests. Dairy farmers, for instance, have assailed the Canadian agreement because it permits Canadian dairy products to enter the country at lower tariffs. Western copper miners have written their congressmen denouncing the agreement with Chile, a big copper producer. Manganese producers tagged the Brazilian agreement a "$2,500,000 gift to the steel industry."

To all critics Secretary Hull's steadfast reply has been that cut-throat commercial competition leads to economic feuds, eventually to war.

Eddie Went Gunning

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

OF ALL the grand stories they're telling about Eddie Rickenbacker, the one which hits me deepest is the incident Clifford Strawn mentions in an article in True Magazine. You've heard how Eddie beat death, time and again, in airplanes or racing automobiles. But did you ever hear of the time when he went out gunning on a far riskier job?

He'd come home from the First War and America was his. From the Goddess of Liberty to the Golden Gate, the gang turned out to do our Eddie proud. Banquets, fiestas, parades, even a one hundred thousand dollar movie contract. But Eddie increasingly wanted no part of it.

He was sick. Not physically ill but nervous and disorganized. For months he had been living in hell, flinging himself against the German menace with every ounce of fighting fury he possessed. He had slept, eaten, steeped himself in Hate until it had become as vital to his need as gas was to his plane. He actually needed Hate to make him go.

Now he was back in a friendly world. The war was over but Eddie couldn't snap out of it. He still needed the stimulous of that terrible Hate which had carried him for so long. He couldn't think, he couldn't sleep, he was beset by nightmares which made him walk the streets 'til dawn. Always the same nightmare . . . dog fighting in the sky with some German fiend.

What was it all about? Chances are, Eddie didn't know. But he did know that something was getting him down. He had never taken the count yet. He vowed he wouldn't take it this time. But he was going to find some place where there was room enough to fight it out. So he bought himself a rifle and a cheap car and headed for the Arizona desert.

Ever live in the desert or stay in it long enough for its strangeness to pass . . . long enough for the silence to creep up around you in a healing tide? It does things to you, that silence. The hurt goes out of you, the vicious tension relaxes.

You forget the endless hurries and worries that filled your city days. Unconsciously, you drop the old grudges and greeds. They loomed large once but the desert is too big for them now . . . the stars are too bright. Gradually your old Self drops away. There's a new You—simpler, quieter, more powerful. You have been reborn.

I don't know how Eddie Rickenbacker discovered what had happened to him. But he was sleeping normally now. The spurring fury had gone out of him. He waked to a new hunger for life. He no longer felt that life must be filled with death. And at last he realized what had happened and packed the wonder of it in to one sentence.

"I HAD TO LEARN TO FORGET TO HATE," he said.

He had freed himself from his obsession with Hate. And I have a hunch that his marvelous "luck" in outwitting death since then is due to the fact that he has cured himself forever of the poisoning Hate within himself.

There's something for America to think about. It's going to be hard for many of us to come out of this hell without a hangover of Hate. We've been sold on the idea that Hate is Big Medicine. We feel that we can't win this war without it. We're even a little ashamed to discuss the war without violent words and threats. But we're only wishing more woe and waste on ourselves if we do so. For Hate is the deadliest thing you can allow to enter your life.

HATE IS ACTUALLY DEATH. It destroys and demoralizes every healthy aim in life and it's as bad on the HATER as on the HATED. We can and should fight foul programs and practices. That's civilization. But this idea that we should Hate each German, Italian or Jap, per se, is as stupid and stinko as the gutters from which it sprang. Indiscriminate racial Hatred is Nazi philosophy.

So back to you Eddie! And here's thanking God that you had the sense and courage to go gunning on a cleaner, wider trail then the black blitz of death.

Food For Babies.

The Office of Price Administration will at some indefinite date ration certain foods for babies. This probably is the most sensitive item in the whole list of foods. After first noting that canned milk, milk formulas and cereals are NOT included, anxious mohters still will be concerned about canned baby foods they do use and which ARE included—broths, strained or chopped fruits, vegetables or meats.

In no matter is it more incumbent on the Wickard food administration and on OPA than to see to it that the supply for children is ample and evenly available wherever the need exist.

This is another case in which, for reasons we fail to comprehend, OPA saw fit not to fix the effective date. Probably, for babies or not, the stores offering these foods will be well patronized from this time on. It is a case chock full of dynamite.—Detroit News.

Summary of Week's Happenings

Meeting In African White House Unites Allies In Fight to Finish

—By ASSOCIATED PRESS

FOR ALMOST 24 hours, the newspapers and radio were tantalizingly mysterious. All during Tuesday, they said, "an important announcement is expected to be made public. . . . No indication of its nature can be given at present."

Even though accustomed to sensational news after more than a year of the war, a hundred million Americans wallowed in terrific suspense.

They were ready for almost anything—except what they finally learned: That Franklin D. Roosevelt had flown to Africa, had spent 10 days with Winston Churchill in a war strategy conference that laid plans for 1943 to bring about the "unconditional surrender" of Germany, Italy and Japan.

'White House.'

The story, sent over a devious route from Casablanca (literally "White House") to Gibraltar and then cabled to New York and London, told a lot—that the two leaders had discussed the tangled French political situation with Generals Henri Giraud and Charles DeGaulle; that Premier Joseph Stalin and General Chiang Kai-shek were kept informed of the conference results; that President Roosevelt one day traveled 100 miles inland to inspect and lunch with American troops in the field.

But it did not tell how and when the president and his party reached Africa, where they went after the meetings ended, who would direct British, American and French troops in the impending pay-off battle with the Axis in Tunisia.

From No. 4—What?

The tremendous drama of the meeting did not dim its significance. Observers recalled that from the first meeting of FDR and Winston Churchill off Newfoundland in 1941 came the Atlantic Charter. At their second, in Washington late in 1941, they drew up a proposal that 26 anti-Axis countries join forces as the United Nations.

From their third meeting, also in Washington, came the plan for America's first real blow at Hitler—the November, 1942, invasion of North Africa.

So it was reasonable for Americans to assume that from this fourth meeting came plans for the final smashing drive against the Axis in Europe—across the English channel into France, or across the Mediterranean to Italy.

General vs. General.

While the military phase drew top attention, the already-troublesome French political situation became more so. Immediately after the announcement of the Roosevelt-Churchill conferences, there were indications that the political rivalry between Gen. Giraud, North African high commissioner, and Fighting French leader Gen. De Gaulle, had been pushed to the background.

AP's Correspondent Wes Gallagher found no evidence of this. Informed sources, he said, felt that agreement between the two would be a long tedious process. The generals met, they talked, they agreed on the end to be achieved—the liberation of France. The hitch seemed to be that each wanted to determine the means to the end.

At Home

Profit or Loss.

Principal objection to proposed pay-as-you-go tax plans is that the treasury would lose a year's revenues if the tax clock were turned ahead, collections placed on a current basis.

To Beardsley Ruml, New York banker-merchant who offered one of the earliest tax revision plans, the argument is trifling. The final answer, said he during the week as congress prepared to take up the tax problem, can be found by "examining the position of the treasury on Judgment Day when the books are finally closed."

In the past few weeks, the pay-as-you-go tax plan has spurted in congressional favor, lately appeared to have solid support from some members of the house ways and means committee, tackling the job of how to raise an additional $16,000,000,000 in revenues asked by the president in his budget message.

Jeffers vs. Army, Navy.

Big Bill Jeffers hadn't been rubber administrator more than a few weeks before he had his first tangle with Washington officialdom. Then, in a classic outburst he told a senate committee he would not yield to any "pressure group" in determining the best course for synthetic rubber production.

During the week, Jeffers bounced into another argument, this time he was ready to take on "the army and navy loafers" who, he said, were impeding the war effort.

Jeffers' accusation came after a weeks-long sub-surface conflict over the manner, and the speed, with which the synthetic rubber program was going ahead.

At mid-week, congress had decided to act. The house naval affairs committee ordered an investigation of the Jeffers charges, indicated a thorough airing of the rubber problem.

The Great Dark Way.

On a Saturday night last September traffic policemen on Broadway cussed and blew their whistles until their ruddy faces turned several shades darker. They wondered whether the calendar suddenly had gone haywire, for the only comparison of the crowd that overflowed sidewalks that night was the time-honored jam of New Year's Eve.

That was only the beginning. Every week-end New York is overrun with flush factory workers, suddenly prosperous industrialists, service men, their wives and girl friends. They come by ferry and bus and train from New Jersey and Connecticut and Massachusetts and half a dozen other states. The natives turn the town over to them and stay at home.

The same thing is going on in hundreds of other cities in the nation, of course. But there's no denying that New York these days is a Saturday night town.

Death of a Town Crier.

The last words written by Alexander Woollcott, the man of euphonious sentences and incisive phrases, were scribbled on a piece of notepaper. "I am feeling sick," he wrote to Dr. Harry Gideonse, chairman of a radio network discussion "Is Germany Incurable?"

The program continued while Woollcott was helped from the studio. A few hours later while the radio audience still did not know that anything was amiss, the Town Crier's own heart ailment proved incurable and he died in a New York hospital.

Author, playwright, drama critic, radio columnist, White House intimate, the "Man" of "The Man Who Came to Dinner" in typical Woollcott extravaganza outlived the physician who told him more than two years before that he must take things easy else his numbered years would be cut short. Woollcott was actively fighting the Axis in his own way when the end come at 56.

Abroad

After Ten Years.

Ten years ago Adolf Hitler became chancellor of Germany, set out on the road to a greater Reich, a greater Europe, a greater world built strictly according to the pattern he alone would devise.

This week-end, the anniversary of his ascension to power, found Adolf on a detour. His armies were facing a trap in Africa, a rout in Russia; there was gloom on the home front and trouble in the occupied countries.

Nowhere could his propaganda ministry find comfort, and for the first time since the war's beginning, the ministry has admitted it. Strange were the outpourings of the Berlin radio: It told of the evacuation of the Russian key city of Voronezh; it disclosed that the Russians virtuallyy had liquidated the once-powerful German Sixth army at the gates of Stalingrad.

Allied experts studying the broadcasts suggested three explanations for the change of tune: (1) Control of military strategy is swinging from Hitler to the professional army men; (2) The home front is being prepared for further, more disastrous war news, (3) It is a propaganda move, intended to induce complacency on the part of the Allies.

'Continuous, Calculated . . .'

When the U. S. finally blunted the radiations of Japan's rising sun in the Pacific, the battle line was anchored on the Aleutians in the north, passed through Midway, and held at Australia in the south.

Beyond that were the countless islands Japan had conquered. Allied strategy seemed to call for a holding operation in the Pacific until the Axis was beaten in Europe, then recapture of these islands, one by one.

But from America's No. 1 Pacific soldier, Gen. Douglas MacArthur, winner in the last round on the Papuan peninsula, last week came polite dissent. Couched in the textbook language of a communique, MacArthur offered "a new form of campaign . . . which points to the ultimate defeat of the enemy in the Pacific."

The general spoke out against "the dilatory and costly island-to-island advance that some have assumed to be necessary" and proposed instead "the continuous calculated application of airpower."

Whittlers.

U. S. strategy in the Solomons was showing no defects during the week and another new name was added to the glossary of fighting places.

Pushing from their bases in the vicinity of Henderson airfield, U. S. forces moved to Kokumbona, the spot at which many earlier Japanese landings were reported to have been made.

The advance indicated a gradual widening of American holdings on the contested island, fortified earlier statements by a returning Marine commander, Lt. Col. Lewis B. Puller, that Jap forces on Guadalcanal had been whittled from 15,000 to 4,000 since the start of the campaign.

Watching Trends

—By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—Not many weeks ago, this column suggested that wartime government agencies use the census bureau in assembling statistical information on which to base the big decisions that affect our daily lives.

It would be presumptuous to say that that had anything to do with the O.P.A. decision to place its nation-wide sampling of food consumption, prices, shortages, etc., in the lap of the census bureau. It is, however, so far as I know, the first time that any war agency has called on census for anything more than the now stale facts and figures that grew out of the 1940 enumeration.

The census bureau is one of the most efficient agencies of our government. Once every ten years, it counts a lot more than noses. The statistical data it gathers is the springboard for much of the governmental, cultural, medical, legislative and business activities in the country.

WHAT most people don't know is that when all decennial nose-counters and tabulators have gone home, census maintains a staff of statistical wizards that can tell you from day to day almost exactly where the center of population is, what the birth rate is doing, what happened to last year's spinach crop, what state probably will have the most illiterates in 1959, and what became of the Joads.

On a few weeks notice, census undoubtedly could start turning the wheels of machinery that would give a truer sampling of our nation's woes and wants than all the polls put together simply because census has been sampling scientifically for years.

That's why it's good news to this correspondent that OPA has called upon them to produce the "Wartime Food Diary." Census is going into 58 counties in 45 states, selecting 3,000 "representative families" and asking the "lady of the house" to keep a day-to-day record of food purchases, consumption, prices, etc.

THE reports will be made frequently and will provide OPA with almost a daily picture of what is going on in the kitchens and dining rooms of American homes. Coupled with reports from producers, wholesalers and retailers, it should leave OPA no out in forestalling regional or national shortages, surpluses, price changes, or diet deficiencies.

Whether these ailments can be corrected will depend on a number of things, over many of which OPA will have no direct control (transportation, crop failures, abnormal demands from the military forces, etc.) but being able to spot the symptoms quickly in 3,000 representative homes should go a long way toward providing immediate cures.

I'll place my bet now that the "Wartime Food Diary" will be one of OPA's most effective weapons in getting the job done in the war months ahead.

Rosalie made a little moaning sound. "Oh, Bailey," she said, "not more visiting firemen to be entertained—now don't tell me!"

"You don't do much of it," Bailey said justly.

"If I did as much as you'd like me to do, I'd be doing it all the time."

"But you don't," he said. "And of course you needn't tonight if you don't want to. I have to take these people out and give them a whirl—but I'll tell them you're ill, or away, if you'd rather not go."

"Who are they?"

"They're from California."

"How many of them."

"Two. Man and wife. Name of Henderson—he was a classmate of mine, Whit Henderson — and really they're not so bad. They might even amuse you."

"I doubt it, somehow," Rosalie said. "California, classmate, customers—I know the combination. They always think I'm affected because I have a Boston accent, and they always look at you as if you still had numbers on your back . . .

"And that's my hangover talking," she said with a sudden change in tone. "I'm sorry. Of course I'll do it—if I live. What kind of an evening would they be wanting?"

"Well, black tie," Bailey said. "And they'd like the theater—but we can skip that. We've seen everything that's any good haven't we?"

"Twice," said Rosalie.

"So the thing to do is dine late, and then take them dancing somewhere."

"Let's dine very late," said Rosalie, "and linger long at the table, and then take them somewhere where there's a floor show that goes on for hours and hours, I mean, let somebody else do the dancing is my feeling."

The Hendersons, as Bailey had said, were not so bad. Rosalie in her Wall-Street-wife capacity had encountered much worse. Mrs. Henderson was pretty in a wholesome sort of way.

Usually the husbands were nicer than the wives—but not this time. Whit Henderson was a man who smiled whenever he said anything, and who talked a great deal. Rosalie recognized his type —he was one of those classmates who bought their bonds through Bailey because it brought them on a friendlier footing with him than they had ever achieved in college. His attitude towards Bailey now was compounded half of hero-worship, half of an exaggerated intimacy—with just an occasional dash of the buyer's condescension. Towards Rosalie he was heavily gallant, and full of labored compliments. He had a habit of thrusting his face too close to the face of his vis-a-vis. His dinner jacket had the wrong lapels—Rosalie prided herself on her interest in and the knowledge of men's clothes. She could tell that he was going to dance badly, and strenuously, and tirelessly.

So she herself chose the restaurant where they dined, and it was a place with no music. But this was only a temporary respite. At eleven o'clock Bailey said, "And now where shall we go?" and there was a little discussion about it, during which it turned out that the Hendersons had been everywhere, and seen everything, in their week in New York.

"Wel, then, you choose," Rosalie said. "We always go to the same places. We're really not up on the other ones at all." This was true—they liked the small, intimate bars.

When Whit Henderson suggested Ruby Mallory's, Rosalie said, "Oh, yes, let's go there. If you'd like to? she added, to Mrs. Henderson.

"I would. I love that place."

"I'm ashamed to say we've never been there," Rosalie said. "—Bailey and I. We've always meant to try it and we never have."

That settled it, and Whit became proprietary about the evening, saying proudly that their education had been neglected. He herded them out of the quiet restaurant and into a cab, whose driver he instructed just how to go. "This is Mallory's new place," he told them en route "The federal agents raided the last one she had and broke up the furniture with hatchets and smashed mirrors. You must have read about it. They've done that to her several times, but she always comes back again, bigger and better."

The new Club Mallory was on Forty-eighth street. Enormous red electric letters announced it from a long way off. It was in a vast loft on the second floor. This had once been a shirtwaist factory, and then the headquarters of a political club, and now it was one of the largest and gaudiest cabarets New York had ever seen. You ascended to it by way of a broad dusty-carpeted staircase; or you could take the little elevator, if you didn't mind the crush of people. On the stairs, there were framed photographs of the performers and the show girls, marching up the rubbed black-velvet walls besides you, all the way. The checkroom was in the tiny lobby at the bottom, and there were easels there, holding still larger photographs of Ruby Mallory and her principals.

Rosalie and Mrs. Henderson stood waiting for the men to check their coats, and Mrs. Henderson said of Ruby's photograph, "Isn't she wonderful? Look at her."

"I am," said Rosalie appreciatively. "She looks like a pink mammy."

Her glance strayed on towards the next easel, and rested idly on a photograph of a young man with a pleasant face, faintly familiar. . . . Some entertainer she had seen somewhere before, no doubt. She took this for granted, not bothering to look at his name on the little brass plate at the foot of the frame. "Hobey Hadley —Master of Ceremonies."

"Ready?" Bailey said at her elbow, and she turned away.

Somehow they always got good tables, even when there weren't any. It was Bailey's height, and his general magnificence; it was Rosalie's beauty; it was their clothes, and the air they had of being used to the best and expecting it. Ruby Mallory's major-domo, Guiseppi, led them at once to a ringside table, not too close to the band, from which he whisked off a "Reserved" sign that had been holding it against all comers. There remained the other small printed placard that was ubiquitous on night-club tables in those days—"WARNING! We earnestly request the co-operation of all our guests in seeing that no intoxicating liquors are brought into or consumed upon these premises."

"Please have this iced," Bailey said to the maitre d'hotel, handing him a paper-wrapped package. That was the champagne—two quarts of it, and the real stuff. Because it had turned out at dinner that the Hendersons, though impressed by champagne, didn't otherwise care much for it, the host and hostess had also brought along a bottle of whisky. Rosalie had this in the big sleeve of her evening coat. She produced it now, and Bailey put it under the table.

The place was full of people and smoke and noise and merriment. There were countless tables, rising on three tiers from the crowded dance floor. The orchestra played against a golden curtain on the bright big stage. Bailey said to Mrs. Henderson, "Come on and dance with me," and took her by the hand, and she got up eagerly. Rosalie, watching through her eyelashes, decided that she was in a little flutter over dancing with Bailey; probably any new man was a thrill to her. She looked tall and rather taut as Bailey put his arm around her, but she fitted her steps to his and they were off all right . . . Rosalie's lazily watching glance returned to Whit Henderson, and she smiled slightly at him.

"Would you like to dance too?" he said.

"If you would."

They rose. The orchestra was playing Cross Your Heart, from Queen High; it was Rosalie's favorite tune of the moment, and she wished they had saved it until next time, when she could have danced it with Bailey. Henderson danced as she had been afraid he would. As she was thinking this, he said, "I don't know any of the new steps," which was already obvious.

"But you dance beautifully," he added. "Thank you," Rosalie said . . . Over his shoulder she looked at what the women had on, and how they had their hair done, and she listened to what people roundabout were saying; her attention was always fixed remotely, except in flirtations.

Whit said, "There she is now. Ruby Mallory."

"Where?"

"Sitting over there. You can't miss her," Whit said, "if you're looking in the right direction. Or even anywhere nearly in the right direction."

This was true. Rosalie's eyes had found the obvious Ruby Mallory, and were taking her in . . . a tremendous mountain of a woman in a glittering rhinestone-studded dress, with a feather dingus of some sort stuck in her wild red-and-gray hair. She was drinking coffee, and smoking a cigaret in a stubby holder. At the table with her there were three men, one of whom looked like a bootlegger, one like a gangster, one like a prohibition agent. A fourth man, a young one, somehow dashing in a good dinner jacket, was bending over her, evidently receiving instructions of some sort.

He was standing just off the floor, and a sudden collision from the other side bumped Rosalie into him as she passed. "I beg your pardon," the young man said, barely glancing her way . . . Then he did look at her, straightening up suddenly, with such a blaze of blue eyes in a brown, attractive face that she herself looked hard at him, and in the next instant recognized him. Her feet stopped dancing, and she twisted around in Henderson's arms. "It is not!" she cried incredulously.

"Well, that goes double," Hobey said. "It isn't you either."

Your Federal Income Tax

NO. 24: DEPRECIATION
(PART 2)

The "useful life" of a property, for Federal income tax purposes, is considered as its term of use for the purpose designed. Complete exhaustion of a property is not required in estimating the annual depriciation, but if it possesses salvage value at the end of the useful life, this value must be taken into account in determining the depreciation rate. Thus, the useful life of a rental building would be its useful rental life, though at the end of that period it may possess scrap or salvage value which must be taken into account. For the guidance of taxpayers, the Bureau of Internal Revenue has prepared a bulletin (Bulletin F) setting forth Bureau practice in regard to depreciation deductions and estimated useful life of various types of property.

After the estimated useful life of the property has been determined, the capital sum to be recovered may be charged off over the period either in equal annual installments or in accordance with any recognized trade practice. The amount so charged off must be used to reduce the cost (plus any additions and betterments) or other basis at which the property is held, and if the property is subsequently sold or exchanged, that reduced basis becomes the adjusted basis for determining the gain or loss on the sale or exchange.

If it is clearly shown that, because of economic or other conditions, property must be abandoned at a date prior to the end of its normal useful life, so that depreciation deductions alone are insufficient to return the cost or other basis, a reasonable deduction for obsolescence may be allowed in addition to depreciation.

As stated above, depreciation allowances are based upon the cost "or other basis." If the property was acquired by purchase after Feb. 28, 1913, the cost is the basis. If acquired by purchase prior to March 1, 1913, the basis is the cost of the property less depreciation sustained prior to March 1, 1913, or the fair market value on March 1, 1913, whichever is greater. If the property was acquired by gift after Dec. 31, 1920, the basis is the same as it would have been in the hands of the donor or the last preceding owner by whom it was not acquired by gift.

While land, as stated above, is not ordinarily depreciable, an allowance corresponding to depreciation, known as depletion, is permitted in the case of mineral property from which minerals (including oil) are being extracted. In the case of certain farming operations, requiring expenditures to maintain the productivity of the soil, such as orchards, where regular replanting must be practiced, or farm land requiring periodic clearing or drainage or application of fertilizer, depreciation deductions to recover the sums expended may be permitted in accordance with the exhaustion of value, if the amount so expended in developing the property for use is treated as a capital expenditure.

MANSFIELD BUSINESS IN REVIEW

Mansfield Photo Engraving Co. Engaged In War Work

Skilled Craftsmen Lend Art to Multiple Processes.

The Mansfield Photo Engraving company, since its inception fourteen years ago, has kept pace, methodically, with new developments within the industry . . . . one which plays a major part in the war program today.

In fact, the first "shot" fired over Africa were propaganda bullets . . . . pamphlets printed and engraved in American plants.

Managing partners in the local plant, the Mansfield Photo Engraving company, are Philip Dickerson and Cliff Sherrard, who welcome the opportunity to work with customers to the end that their aims and efforts in the preparation of advertising copy will meet the fullest measure of success in securing a market for services and products.

Photo engraving, Sherrard explains, is a reproductive art founded upon principles of photography. It recreates originals, engraved on a metal plate, from which thousands of duplicate copies may be printed.

Our navy, army and air force, as well as all war production plants, require thousands of such reproductions of blue prints, maps, photographs, so that trainees may be instructed in war maneuvers and also complete units may be assembled from various parts in war plants in the least possible time.

The Mansfield Photo Engraving company is doing an important share in engraving illustrated manuals for these purposes.

Another new field for the photo engraver emerges from the need for paper printed cartons which are replacing those formerly made of metal, as well as for the increased need for dehydrated foods, now packaged in paper.

This requires engraved labels for identification of foods and for a number of other essential civilian requirements.

A look at the merchants' shelves, Dickerson declares, will impress you with the multiple changes in brands and the new products that must, this war time, supplant the old.

New campaigns, for better health . . . for War Bonds . . . for scrap, fat and rubber, all rely on the photo engraver's art for effectiveness, he says.

Newspapers, magazines, farm publications, religious papers, too, lean heavily upon the graphic arts for purposeful advertising.

Their constant and unerring success in blending the true craftsmanship essential to the faithful reproduction of your copy, together with a sympathetic understanding of the advertiser's needs for economy, speed and purpose, truly marks the Mansfield Photo Engraving company as a desirable source of supply for engravings.

Farm Population Drops To Lowest Mark Since 1910

COLUMBUS —(INS)— For more than 30 years it has been "back to the farm" when agricultural labor was least in demand and "off to the bright lights" when the nation needs more farm products, Ohio State University's Bureau of Business research reports.

"Although the fluctuations in farm population are relatively small the bureau pointed out, "it is the margin which may mean the difference between an adequate farm-labor supply or a shortage.

"Today, an increase in the demand for farm labor exists and true to form, the farm population is decreasing, notwithstanding the fact that birth rates far exceed death rates in rural areas. It is estimated that the present farm population is about 29.1 million, the smallest since 1910.

The decrease in farm population in 1942 from 1940 is largely the result of approximately 500,000 young men going into the armed services and approximately 900,000 migrating to urban areas.

Canadian shoe factories last year produced 31,500,000 pairs of shoes, an increase of 22 per cent.

Public Requested To Conserve Canned Milk

The increased demand for evaporated milk by the armed forces is making itself felt more acutely here each day and Mansfield merchants are urging the cooperation of consumers in coping with the problem.

The public, apparently anticipating this shortage, has aggravated the situation by buying and hoarding unnecessary supplies of evaporated milk so that now doctors and baby specialists are alarmed over the present shortage of the brands needed for babies.

Ralph A. Schad, sr., secretary of the Independent Grocers Institute which services Square Deal Food Stores in Mansfield, has suggested that the general public refrain from purchasing the three brands recommended for babies—Pet, Carnation and Wilson.

There are only from 300 to 500 cases of these brands left in the city as compared with 14,000 to 15,000 cases of other brands.

These private label brands, Mr. Schad declares, are all high quality evaporated milks, excellent for table use or cooking purposes.

Schad also requests that grocers conserve Pet, Carnation and Wilson milks by explaining this need to customers who, Mr. Schad feels, will show patriotic cooperation when they understand the situation.

Dive-bombing experiments were conducted by Marine corps fliers as early as 1920.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

At Halloran's shout from the next room I sat bolt upright on the couch where I had been enjoying a luxurious doze. So intriguing a problem was presented by that shout that I wondered if I ever should sleep again.

For Halloran's first excited intonation suggested sudden recognition of someone he had not expected to see, but that was nullified by his question: "Who are you?"

It was a [illegible] puzzle, but I could [illegible] what had happened. Halloran [illegible] removed the false [illegible] and seeing the [illegible] make-up man [illegible]

I could hear [illegible] their excited [illegible] ed that some [illegible] would come [illegible] ther, as the only [illegible] be able to solve [illegible] lay behind Halloran's [illegible] ment. It behooved [illegible] into conventional attire [illegible] I did in only a minute [illegible]

Asks For Spencer.

To use Dicky's [illegible] I [illegible] under the wire with only a split second to spare. [illegible] knocking just as I was [illegible] justing the last hairpin. I [illegible] to the door and a [illegible] Halloran [illegible] where [illegible] and I [illegible] he would not be [illegible] the eyes until his facial [illegible] tation was complete.

"Mrs. Graham," Halloran began excitedly, "is your father here?"

"No, he isn't," I said. "Is there anything I can do?"

"I don't know," he said. Then asked, "Will he be back soon?"

"That I cannot tell with any certainty," I said. "He is at the hotel and may be back here in five minutes, or he may not for another hour."

Leaves It To Madge.

"Can you telephone and ask him to come back for a few minutes?" he asked.

I was dismayed at the thought of interrupting my father's colloquy with Philip Veritzen on so vital an issue, and spoke with decision.

"His errand is so important that I could not do that unless for a matter of life or death."

"It is just that, I'm thinking," Halloran said, with a hopeful look.

"I'm terribly sorry," I said, "but my father would be exceedingly angry if I called him on the word of anyone else. I shall have to know more about this, and [illegible] whether from his standpoint I would be justified in calling him."

"Of course," was the prompt reply, "all I'm going on is Mr. Underwood. Whatever he says goes with me, for I never saw any of the rest of you before. But Mr. Underwood said that if I ran into anything I didn't understand, and Mr. Spencer wasn't around, you were fully empowered to deal with any situation in his absence."

"I think you may accept Mr. Underwood's word on that," I told [illegible]

[illegible] he returned [illegible] smile, [illegible] to ask you a question [illegible]

"Ask me anything you like," I said. "If I can answer it, I will."

"[illegible] young man in the next room," Halloran began hesitatingly. "The one that I'm working on [illegible] know him well under that [illegible] could [illegible] be an impostor [illegible] looks like the man you know?"

"The Authority on Authorities"

PLAYING PROBABILITIES

There are only two known ways of dealing with elements which you don't know and can't infer. One of them is by following a "hunch" or what some of the dear ladies God bless them!—call "intuition." The other is by figuring out probabilities, or in other words, which of two alternatives is the more likely. The first method is so startling in its results, at times that it seems uncanny. But in the long run the probabilities offer a more dependable foundation for ordinary mortals who do not claim the possession of special supernatural powers.

Bidding about like that occurred at two duplicate tables. One declarer made the contract, by foresight and playing of the probabilities, whereas the other failed for lack of both. The play began the same in each case, with the spade K and a ruff of the spade A. Then came the variance.

The unsuccessful declarer quickly used the club K, Q and J to settle the missing trumps, then finessed the diamond Q. When the J dropped, he laid down the A, feeling sure of catching either the K or 10. When that play failed, he had no earthly way to avoid losing both a diamond and a heart, and so lost one trick too many.

The other declarer, after ruffing the second spade, provided for more possibilities. He led the club K to the A, finessed the diamond Q and, when the J dropped, realized the value of leading twice toward the A-9-8 for a finesse. Even if this lost to a singleton 10 or K, he would have a ten-ace left over the other honor. Thus he could limit diamond losers to one, and have his fourth diamond to use for a discard of the heart J. With the two together, he did lose one diamond. He took his club Q, club J, led a diamond and, when East played the 10, let it win. After ruffing the returned spade, he went to dummy with the heart A, finessed the diamond 9, and the A ditched the heart J.

Your Week-End Lesson.

Suppose the declarer leads a card from his own hand which the dummy cannot beat. And suppose some card which would beat that one is not in either your own hand or dummy. What rule ordinarily applies in such a case, if you have no other information to guide your own use of a card which will beat the one led?

'Two Laughs a Minute' Talk Given Senior High Graduates

outer circle. Happiness then, is the expansion pushing out the outer circle in accordance with the structural law of the universe. It will come only with spiritual growth."

To condense the definition briefly, Newcomb said, "Education consists in finding out what the laws of the universe are and true happiness, is working with these laws not against them.

"Man has his choice of working with or against these laws though—with them there is freedom, against them discouragement and defeat. Reason is not an end in itself but a tool to use in adjusting oneself to the value and purpose of living, which is beyond reason alone. The Bible is the manual of all instruction. Man has disregarded God's laws and substituted his own, thus the confusion of today."

"What is the answer?" Newcomb asked. "If the world has forgotten God's precepts and laws then we must turn back to God!" In closing he told the graduates that their commencement night ended a period of development and now they would go out into a world which might be difficult to live in yet would be a world of opportunity of far greater value than anything they had had so far.

Before the speaker was introduced by Supt. of Schools W. L. Miller, Charles Hayes, president of the graduating class, spoke to the audience in behalf of his fellow students. Principal Glenn G. Rohleder spoke briefly following the address and called upon Walton O. Leedy, member of the board of education, to present the diplomas.

Rohleder congratulated each graduate as he came upon the stage to receive his diploma. The invocation and benediction were offered by Rev. Albert L. Linder, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church. Under the direction of J. Merton Holcombe, conductor, the school orchestra played the processional, "Graduation March" by Williams and the recessional.

HELP CHINESE, SPEAKER'S PLEA

Y.W.C.A. Executive Says China Won't Give Up; Tells of Own Internment by Japs.

British and Dutch. This group was rounded up by the Japs shortly after the fall of Hongkong. At that time Miss Dudley was in Hongkong and she said she never experienced such a depressing day than Christmas, 1941, when the populace became aware that the city had surrendered.

No attention was paid to the camp by the Japs once they had quartered the foreigners, the speaker said. In one way this was a good thing, Miss Dudley indicated, because it permitted the internees to set up their own management and organization. One of the worst features of the whole situation was the food.

"At first," said Miss Dudley, "they were only going to feed us flour mixed with a little salt and sugar. We told them we could eat bread but not just plain flour. Then they brought up big bags of dirty rice full of weevils, and a small amount of coarse red meat. We ate this in a kind of stew for about six months."

Although she and some of the others were fortunate in having a stock of canned goods which they were permitted to bring to the camp they were afraid to eat much of it at one time because they had no idea as to how long they would be interned. "As a result we were hungry most of the time," Miss Dudley said.

"Everybody became ill because of the food although the women in the camp made an effort to cope with mal-nutrition, beri-beri, scurvy and foot and mouth disease by organizing diet kitchens. They experimented with cooking the rice and discovered ways that it would be easy for infants and the sick to digest."

Out of such situations the medical world is making new discoveries, the speaker said. One form of body swelling due to improper diet could be banished almost immediately by the consumption of three or four tins of prepared meat.

"What health I have today I attribute to my Chinese friends," Miss Dudley said, relating how they brought her quinine when she had malaria.

"The secret of living through such experiences is to keep busy by looking after other people's needs," said Miss Dudley.

Greetings to the association were extended by Mrs. Irl Fischer, president. Mrs. Wallace Campbell, the presiding chairman, introduced the speaker. Group singing conducted by Miss Estelle Smith with Miss June Jean Shively at the piano and folk dances by the Beta Gamma club girls and "Saturday House" children featured the evening. Mrs. Jessie Crane, Girl Reserves' secretary, directed the folk dancing. Eileen Schuler accompanied on the accordion. Rev. A. L. Linder of the Park Avenue Baptist church, pronounced the invocation.

The annual business meeting of the association will be held Tuesday night, Feb. 9, at the Y. W. C. A, Mrs. Fisher announced.

Arrangements for the dinner were in charge of Mrs. John H. Finefrock. Her committee included Mrs. Faith Remy, Mrs. Paul McConnelll, Mrs. E. K. Clark and Mrs. W. H. Burleson.

Berean Bible Club Name Adopted by New Study Group

A new Bible study club was organized Friday afternoon in the home of Mrs. H. O. Baer, 552 East Townview Circle. It will be known as the Berean Bible club.

Officers were elected with Mrs. Baer being named as president; Mrs. J. K. Linsenmayer, vice president; Mrs. C. F. Wolf, secretary, and Mrs. Hamilton Patton, treasurer.

The group decided to meet the second and fourth Fridays of each month. At the next meeting the members will begin the study of St. Luke, it was announced.

The club will meet at the home of Mrs. Wolfe, Abbeyfeale road, for the next session, Feb. 12.

by REX HESS

Down in Mt. Vernon they l Bobby "Peanuts" Baker, ger cage star, the "Mansfield Traveler."

Account of the Mansfield-. Vernon game in Mt. Vernon News said:

'Four of Baker's fielders lowed some of the neatest nning seen this side of Ohio dium. The traveling was parent even to the grinning nch-warmers, but Whistlen Chuck Imel and George nges happened to be looksome other way."

and Spiv Harris, in his column the Mt. Vernon paper, says: Bobby (Peanuts) Baker's run-shoot act is the loudest and gest laugh in the Mansfield cage camp. His routine starts h a dribble towards the sides from the circle. As he atnpts to cut, he tucks the ball er his arm and cuts, like a fback. He gets away with it ause officials can't help lookfor fouls from above.

Sideliners, who generally get ider view of proceedings under hoops than referees, can't miss traveling.

"Coaches Paul Snyder and arry Mehock just laugh and y, 'He's been doing it all sean.' Cage Mentor Vern Hoffin doesn't say anything. It 't necessary.

'But don't get us wrong, s Baker boy is good despite bad habit which may cost Tygers an important game ne day.

Peanuts isn't the only ger who knows his way und the court. They're all urate one-hand pushers, y understand the reasons being alert on defense, l they move fast. And y're all sophs and juniors. Guess maybe the junior h system is working in ketball at Mansfield too."

Vell, now, you know I haven't n the Tygers in action since Cleveland Collinwood game last Dec. 22. Old Man Flu a Saturday night game schedhave ruled me out. I gotta k on Saturday night.

ut the last time I saw Baker those early season games, re were times when he travand times when he didn't. ing out of that hop-skip-andp with which he winds up his e for the bucket.

ometimes his timing is off in bbing the ball at the end of hop-skip etc. and he grabs it soon and it's traveling. If the is still in the dribble it's perly legal.

It takes a sharp eye to watch ll and feet at the same time l decide when he's traveling l when he isn't. But it's a bit which should be cured.

Falcons Upset By Bobcats

Capital Widens Gap Over Bee Gee Quintet.

(By United Press)

THE GAP is widening between Capital university and the Bowling Green Falcons, two of Ohio's better college basketball machines.

Bowling Green, which found the going so easy during the early part of the season when they rang up 14 straight victories before being defeated, stalled again last night.

A fighting Bobcat team from Ohio university handed the Falcons their second defeat of the season 51 to 42 at Athens.

Paced by Kenny Walters who scored 12 points and freshman Center Vern Thomas the Bobcats muffled the high-scoring attack of the Falcons and triumphed easily. Wyndol Gray, the Falcons' ace freshman forward was high scorer of the game with 18 points, but his total was much below the average he has set throughout the season.

Youngstown gave Bowling Green its first defeat last week, but the Falcons came back to win their 15th game over Kent State before running into Ohio U. last night.

The Capital cagers, meanwhile, kept whipping through their unbeaten streak running it to nine straight last night at the expense of Lockbourne Air Base by a 58 to 31 score.

The Lutherans, leading both Ohio colleges and the Ohio conference, outclassed the service team in every department of play. Capital led at halftime 30 to 15 and the Lutherans were never threatened.

Baldwin Wallace led by freshman Center Joe Kortohitz who scored 13 points for individual honors defeated Ohio Wesleyan 37 to 36 in a nip-and-tuck battle. The victory was the Yellow Jackets' seventh in 10 games and Wesleyan's eighth loss in 12 games.

Mt. Union, Ohio conference champion last year, got back on the winning path after losing their last two games by defeating Cincinnati 58 to 48.

Bulldogs Trim Y Junior Five

Simpson Marks Up 7th Straight Victory.

A smooth working John Simpson basketball team chalked up its seventh win in a row last night, drubbing the Y M C A Juniors 52 to 29, on the "Y" hardwood.

Paced by George Thomas and Ollie Cline, the Simpson outfit put on an impressive display of passing and shooting to keep its perfect record intact.

Thomas dropped in 11 buckets and one free toss for 23 tallies to take scoring honors while Cline tossed in 10.

Scoring most of their baskets on set shots, the Bulldogs grabbed a 17 to 8 advantage in the first frame and racked up 13 more in the second to lead, 30 to 12, at the half.

The 'Y' five made a ball game of it in the last half, scoring 17 points to Simpson's 22.

Brubary got nine tallies as his team, giving its most disappointing performance of the season dropped its eighth game in 13 starts.

WON'T WORRY OVER MATERIAL AT PITT

PITTSBURGH — (UP) — Clark D. Shaughnessy, football's gray-haired T-formation specialist, said today that any specific plans he had for his new gridiron charges — the Pittsburgh Panthers—would depend on the material he had to work with, "of which I know practically nothing and will worry less."

Shaughnessy, who resigned his post at the University of Maryland earlier this week to accept a job as head coach at the University of Pittsburgh said the "important thing is to keep our boys in shape."

Orangemen Whip Yellow Jackets

GALION—Galion high Orangemen walked away with the Yellow Jackets of Mt. Vernon, Friday night on the Galion Junior high basketball court, by defeating the Mt. Vernon basketball cagers, 40 to 23. The Galion varsity team was out to prove that their first defeat with Mt. Vernon was an upset in the first round of the N. C. O. season.

Bill Stoner, Galion guard, was star of the court, Friday night, looping in eight field goals and six fouls to total 22 points. He was followed by Captain Charles Heskett who had seven field goals and one foul, totaling 15 points.

Stoner played a nice defensive game, and while his previous games have displayed his guarding qualities, last night's game was high in scoring for the season. Heskett fell behind his usual lead as high point man of the evening.

Sapp, substitute center, was high for the visitors with three field goals and one foul.

FROSH BOOKED

COLUMBUS — (P) — The Ohio State university freshman basketball team will meet the Ohio Wesleyan university naval aviation cadets at Delaware Feb. 3 and in Columbus Feb. 20, Jimmy Hull, Buckeye frosh coach, announced.

Sport Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

NEW YORK — (P) — Detroit papers are campaigning to have Michigan State admitted (and quickly) to the Western conference. . . . They say it's an institution of good standing, has a football stadium that will do and can draw on a big population within an 80-mile radius. . . . And there have been whispers that Pitt's hiring Clark Shaughnessy as grad coach was a move in the same direction. . . . This dept was about ready to give these suggestions a big "Haw haw" when we noticed that Wisconsin plans to start spring football practice a week from Monday. . . . That looks as if the Big Ten colleges were planning on something more than just "recreational" football next fall in spite of the army's demand on their manpower. . . . And since they'll probably have to revise a lot of schedules anyway, it might not be a bad idea to strengthen the league with a couple of new members.

A RISE FROM REISER.

When the Dodgers' Pete Reiser was standing in line with a bunch of other army recruits at the Jefferson Barracks, Mo., reception center the other day, a non-com calling the roll suddenly shouted: "Joe DiMaggio. Is Joe DiMaggio here?" . . . Pete, the boys say, nearly broke his neck trying to locate the Yankee slugger among the inductees before he realized there might be another guy named Joe.

TODAY'S GUEST STAR.

Bob Hooey, Columbus State Journal: "After Bobby Quinn had selected Wallingford, Conn., as the spring training site for his Braves he said he was impressed with weather conditions there. . . . It is at least 10 degrees warmer in Connecticut at that time of the spring than in the other sections. . . . In other words if it's 10 below in Maine, it's only zero in Connecticut."

SERVICE DEPT.

Pvt. S. Morton (Red) Auerbach, the speed-boat racer, seems to have found the perfect army job. He's piloting an army "crash" boat at Langley Field, Va., racing out to rescue any fliers who may land in the water. . . . Marshall Goldberg, the only member of Pitt's "dream" backfield who isn't in the armed forces, has four good reasons for working hard at his defense job. Brother Billy is in the army in Alaska, Isidore is with the air corps in England, and two other brothers, Victor and George, in army camps in the United States.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — (P) — Parker Hall, star backfielder for the Cleveland Rams' National Football league team, has been sworn in as ensign in the United States Navy to serve as physical instructor at the pre-flight school at Chapel Hill, N. C. He reports Feb. 11.

Decide Fate of High School Meets

COLUMBUS — UP — The fate of Ohio's six major high school athletic tournaments will be decided today at a meeting of the Ohio high school athletic association board of control.

Ohio High School Athletic Commissioner H. R. Townsend said the board will decide whether the annual track, golf, baseball, tennis, swimming and wrestling tournaments will be held.

The OHSAA decided at a meeting earlier in the month that the annual Class A and B basketball tournaments will be held at Columbus March 27, but deferred decision on the other tournaments.

Last week Townsend said the state board probably will go along with plans to hold a state track tournament "if the transportation picture does not change."

Willie Pep Beats Stolz

Extends Win Streak To 59 Straight Bouts.

By SID FEDER

NEW YORK — (P) — Unless the block-busters' union bars Wee Willie Pep for flagrant violation of the rules on overwork he probably will whisk his record winning streak 'way up into the stratosphere this year with one of the busiest campaigns ever mapped out for a big-time thumper.

For, less than ten minutes after he polished off lightweight Allie Stolz before a howling collection of 19,088 customers in Madison Square Garden last night, thereby running his string to 59 wins in a row, the featherweight package of pep was hollering to Large Lou Viscusi to get him another opponent for Monday.

Now that, naturally can't be done. To begin with it definitely would cause a slight revolution in the B. B. union. But with Wee Willie wailing for more fights and Large Lou not at all opposed to giving them to him, especially after the sizzling stuff he showed in walloping one of the world's leading lightweights last night . . . the plans were posted immediately to have the Connecticut jumping bean go to the post about every two weeks this year. And one of them is slated to be against Beau Jack who holds half of the world light title, early in March.

And from the way he floored Allie and "finished galloping" to take the decision, there doesn't appear to be anyone in the way just now to put a stop to Willie's string, which has no equal in the modern record book.

He spotted Stolz nearly six pounds but looked stronger than the curly-haired Newark stylist all the way except for a few moments of the fourth and eighth rounds. Allie hit the deck from a hook in the second round.

Cubs Held to 1 Point In Closing Quarter

Shiloh and Union Score Surprise Wins Over Ontario and Plymouth

THE Richland county high school basketball league dope bucket is just a crumpled up tin can today after the kicking around it got in last night's games, and isn't even fit now for scrap use.

Upsets were the disorder of the night as Bellville edged a previously unbeaten Lucas team on the Cubs' own court. Union surprised Lexington and Shiloh brought up a punch out of the league cellar and tagged Ontario with a knockout blow.

Meanwhile Madison's Rambunctious Rams were staging one of the hottest shooting sprees of the season to defeat Plymouth and ride into first place in the loop as the only undefeated team in championship play.

Here are the results of last night's proceedings. Read 'em and weep:

Bellville 20, Lucas 19.
Shiloh 24, Ontario 21.
Union 29, Lexington 22.
Madison 52, Plymouth 33.

Biggest upset, of course, was the Bellville victory at Lucas scored on Joe Watkins' short push shot in the last two seconds of play with the score at 18-18. Berger had a chance to tie it up for Lucas with a pair of free tosses, made the first shot, and missed the second.

The Cubs couldn't stop the Blue Jays' Watkins, and that was the ball game . . . that and the fact that the Jays held the Cubs to one lone point in the final quarter.

Lucas led at the first quarter 6-2, but Bellville tied it up at the half 9-9. Then Lucas took the lead again, 18-14 in the third quarter, but they ran out their string doing it. Bellville came back with a 6-1 margin in the final period which saw the big crowd on its feet and breathless with suspense as the game whirled to its close.

Bellville took the preliminary reserve game 21-16.

Lexington's up-and-coming Minute Men, who looked like a threat to the league-leaders a week ago, got a rude shock at Union, although they were able to keep on even terms at 11-11 at the half.

The Minute Men couldn't stop tall Jack Hammett who was really hot on his one-hand shots from the foul circle as he marked up 17 points on seven buckets and three free tosses.

Shiloh's surprising Drummer Boys held the lead all the way over Ontario, including a 10-6 margin at the half, and were paced by James and Daup, each with eight points. Gage got seven and Elliott six for Ontario as the Warriors staged a desperate closing rally, but just weren't able to catch up.

The Rams were hotter than a sixth fire on their invasion of Plymouth going through the Pilgrim's man-for-man like a sieve in the first quarter to a 21-2 lead. Madison missed only two shots in that wild first period and coasted in from there with subs taking over the play through the second and third [illegible].

Shriver led the attack with 13 points and Captain Willie Wynn came up with 12, while Reed got 10 for Plymouth.

There was no upset in the winner of this game but the Rams were set for a close hard battle after Plymouth's two straight wins over Shiloh and Bellville.

Yankees Send Priddy to Nats

Get Bill Zuber to Aid Bomber Mound Staff.

NEW YORK — (P) — The New York Yankees who for a time seemed to have relinquished control of the player marts to other major league clubs, swung back into the trading picture today with the announcement that utility infielder Gerry Priddy and rookie Pitcher Milo Candini had been traded to the Washington Senators.

Simultaneously, the American league champions took another big step in clearing the decks for the start of the 1943 season by mailing salary contracts to 30 players, thus following the lead of the New York Giants who became the first big league squad to begin wage negotiations.

Sale of Priddy and Candini for cash and righthanded Pitcher Bill Zuber gave the Yankees a roster of players who are all 3A in the draft with the exception of Pitcher Atley Donald who is in 1B because of eye trouble and a back ailment.

Zuber, although far from being one of the junior circuit's top pitchers, is 28, married and has two children. Priddy and Candini are more likely to be drafted than the former Senators' slab man.

The release of Priddy climaxes the second half of what had been one of the minor leagues' most brilliant keystone combinations. Teaming with Phil Rizzuto now in the navy, Priddy played ably at Norfolk and Kansas and was brought up by the Yankees in 1941 when Manager Joe McCarthy hoped to streamline his infield with Joe Gordon at first base. But Priddy hurt a leg before the season opened and never did fill the second base slot well enough, while Gordon was out of his element at first. Priddy fell to the role of utility man, filling in at first and third base.

Coffroth Reported Seriously Ill

SAN DIEGO, Cal. — (INS) — James W. Coffroth, 70, dean of American sports promoters, was reported seriously ill today following a heart attack.

Known as "Sunshine Jim" because he consistently had such phenomenal luck with the weather when staging outdoor sporting events, Coffroth was one of the nation's outstanding boxing and horse race promoters.

Coffroth was the first promoter to establish a $50,000 race for horses in his Coffroth handicap at the old Tijuana, Mex., race track.

TWO TILTS THREATEN BIG TEN STANDINGS

CHICAGO — (INS) — Two of the three Big Ten basketball games scheduled for this week-end today threatened to have a distinct bearing on the western conference championship race, now in its final month.

The games — Purdue at Indiana and Northwestern at Illinois—provide the makings for possible upsets that could really make the Big Ten competition a battle instead of the walk away that Indiana and Illinois are making of it. The third game for the week-end, Minnesota at Wisconsin tonight, can do nothing further than enable the Gophers or the Badgers to strengthen their bids for runner-up honors.

China Episode.

A daughter of China who has no time for romance because her heart is set upon only one thing, to avenge her country of the wrongs it has suffered at the hands of the Japanese, is the central character in "China Girl," showing at the Madison. Gene Tierney has the title role while George Montgomery appears as an American newsreel cameraman who escapes from a Jap prison camp. Lynn Bari, Victor McLaglen and Myron McCormick are in the cast. "Time to Kill," with Lloyd Nolan is the second attraction.

Homefront Drama.

The story of a wealthy woman who refuses to have her life disrupted by the war is unfolded in "The War Against Mrs. Hadley," starring Fay Bainter and opening Sunday at the Ritz. Dramatic conflict is afforded when the women's son is drafted, her daughter goes into a canteen and the government appeals for the services of all civilians. Wartime Washington furnishes the locale. Edward Arnold, Richard Ney and Jean Rogers are in the cast. Sonja Henie's "Iceland," is the co-feature.

Musical Features.

Music from two widely diversified categories embellishes the double bill at the Park starting Sunday. "Juke Box Jenny," starring Ken Murray and Harriett Hilliard presents some current hits while "Mountain Rhythm," with the Weaver Brothers and Elviry features some melodious mountain tunes.

3—In Memoriam

IN MEMORY of our loving mother, Laura Henny, died Feb. 1st, 1912, and our loving sister, Edna McKinley, died Feb. 3rd, 1912.

The depth of sorrow we cannot tell
Of loss of those we loved so well.
And while they sleep a peaceful sleep
Their memory we will always keep.
A bitter grief, a shock severe
To part with ones we loved so dear.
God loved them too and thought it best
So took them to eternal rest.
Oh we do miss you loved ones so much.

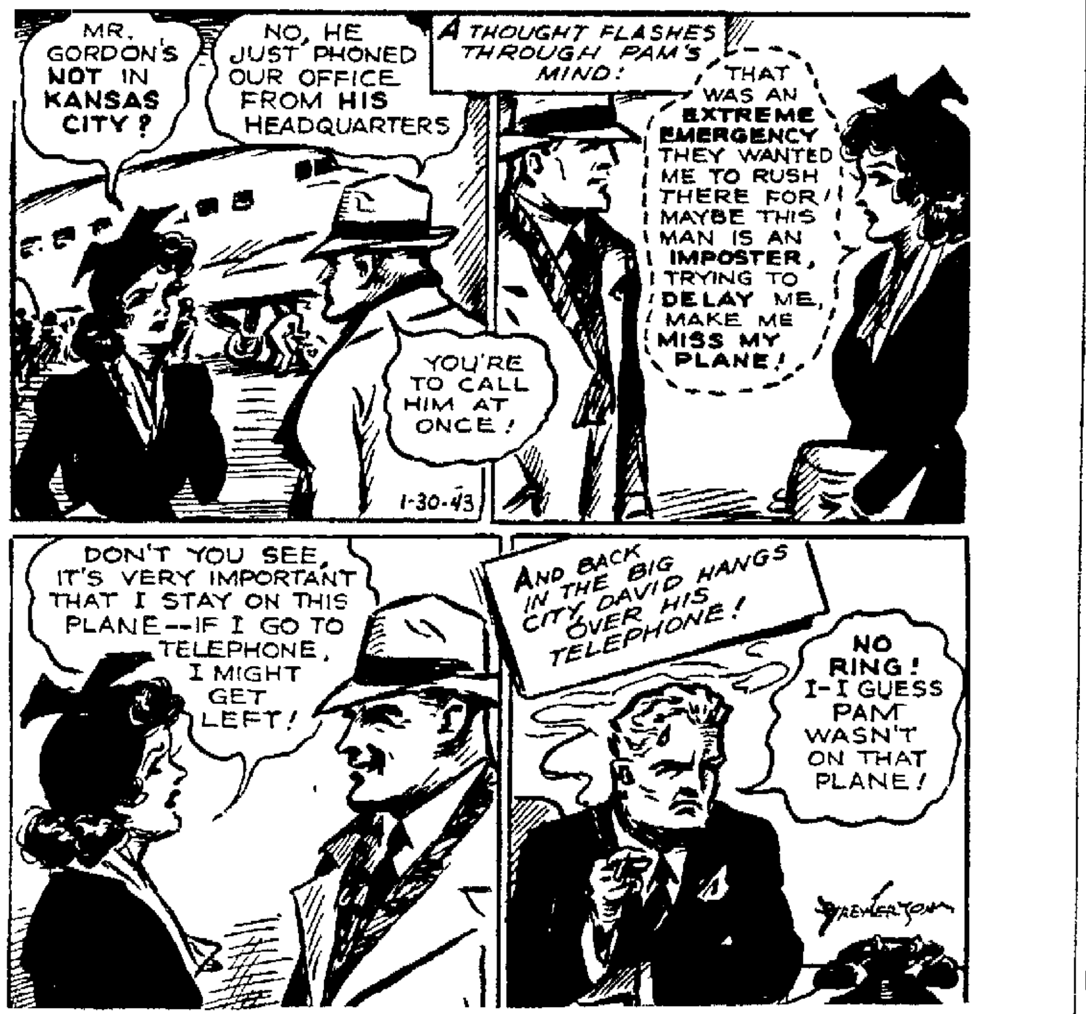
PAM—Suspicion!

By A. W. Brewerton



MR. GORDON'S NOT IN KANSAS CITY ?
NO, HE JUST PHONED OUR OFFICE FROM HIS HEADQUARTERS
A THOUGHT FLASHES THROUGH PAM'S MIND!
THAT WAS AN EXTREME EMERGENCY THEY WANTED ME TO RUSH THERE FOR! MAYBE THIS MAN IS AN IMPOSTER, TRYING TO DELAY ME, MAKE ME MISS MY PLANE!
YOU'RE TO CALL HIM AT ONCE!
1-30-43
DON'T YOU SEE, IT'S VERY IMPORTANT THAT I STAY ON THIS PLANE—IF I GO TO TELEPHONE, I MIGHT GET LEFT!
AND BACK IN THE BIG CITY, DAVID HANGS OVER HIS TELEPHONE!
NO RING! I-I GUESS PAM WASN'T ON THAT PLANE!

Machine Tool Production In Nation Shows Increase Over Old Record.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Small plus and minus signs were pretty evenly divided in today's early stock market proceedings.

Up fractionally at a fairly active opening were Goodrich, Anaconda, International Harvester and Standard Oil (N.J.) Declines were posted for American Telephone, Kennecott, Woolworth and Texas Co.

Market analysts found confirmation of the speed-up of industry in the War Production board summary estimating machine tools produced during December were valued at $131,929,000, an increase of 9.1 per cent over November and 1.4 per cent above the record reached in October.

GET CONTRACTS

Smaller Firms Given More War Jobs Say Officials.

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Smaller companies, which once found it difficult if not impossible to obtain war contracts, now are receiving them in a "steady stream," officials of the Smaller War Plants corporation said today.

Contracts to be awarded by the navy were valued at "hundreds of millions of dollars," with maritime commission contracts expected to total between $50,000,000 and $100,000,000.

military and naval forces based at Natal.

Ideas and information concerning the war efforts of their respective nations were exchanged by the two chief executives, Vargas revealed. One of the chief problems discussed was the Axis submarine campaign in the south Atlantic and Caribbean. Vargas told Mr. Roosevelt in detail what Brazil was doing to combat the submarine menace.

President Roosevelt gave a full account of the north African conferences and the progress made in the effort to unify anti-Axis Frenchmen into a single fighting force.

A joint statement by the two presidents said:

"We have studied the security of the Americas, feeling sure that each American republic is actively interested and equally affected. Power lies in unity. Brazil and the United States hope to make the Atlantic safe for all other American nations."

Naval vessels patrolled the waters off Natal unceasingly and air patrols roared overhead during the time the two presidents were in the port. Anti-submarine boats kept a close watch on the harbor entrance.

The meetings were held aboard a tender in the harbor as destroyers stood guard nearby.

War activities at Natal are on a tremendous scale, President Vargas declared. A great new city appears to have sprung up around the airfields that have been constructed there. American and Brazilian authorities in the area are co-operating together splendidly, he added.

BRITISH BOMB BERLIN, DELAY GOERING TALK

Rain Explosives on Capital as Nazis Celebrate 10th Anniversary.

foray, which penetrated 400 miles of enemy territory. The sleek, two-motored Mosquito was given its name because of its slim lines. Its skin is of plywood, which eliminates rivet heads and enhances its speed—reputedly close to 400 miles an hour.

It was considered possible that the swift ships had swept across Germany at tree-top level to evade and confuse defending German fighter planes and anti-aircraft defenses. The Berlin radio did not leave the air at any time during the raid.

Goering spoke for 90 minutes. "In a thousand years to come," Goering said, "every German will still know that Germany, at Stalingrad, has set the final stamp to ultimate victory."

Paying his respects to the British air force, he added that: "On the day we finally crush Bolshevik resistance I will remember what the RAF has done to Germany."

Speaking of a trapped army of a few thousand men which the Russians said once totalled 220,000, Goering declared that "a people which fight as the Germans are fighting at Stalingrad can and must win." He exhorted his hearers to further war efforts.

Goering began his 90-minute address at noon instead of 11 a. m. as scheduled.

The announcement that Hitler was with his troops—the sector unspecified—evidently meant that he would fail to make an anniversary speech for the second time since he succeeded General von Hindenburg as chancellor in 1933. The previous year was in 1938, when the blood purge of the Nazi party delayed it.

Not since Hitler was appointed reichschancellor in 1933 had the Germans observed the anniversary in such a somber and foreboding atmosphere.

During the hour's delay, the Reuters listening post reported, peculiar noises which sounded like confused shouting broken by an explosion-like bang came from the Berlin broadcasting station.

The announcer kept saying at intervals: "There will be a few more minutes' delay in Marshal Goering's speech."

British ministry of information listeners said they heard what sounded like a shout distant from the microphone, confused voices and then "another shout or bang." Then came band music as the Berlin microphone apparently was cut off in the hall.

The German announcer reported the hall was "adorned with restrained floral tributes and filled with representatives of the general staff, the admiralty, high officers and the armed SS party delegates."

Goering made a left hand admission that Germany had been deceived in Russia's strength on the basis of the Red army's showing in the Finnish war, which he said was "the cleverest camouflage known in the history of the world."

He harped repeatedly on the need for German unity.

"Today we are united and shall fight to the very last for our way of life," Goering declared. "One of our enemies is also united and conditioned by a way of life. Russia would long ago have collapsed had it not been for the strength this gives her."

Addressing himself to the German army, the corpulent reichsmarshal said, "Many of you experienced the rigors of the Russian winter and the weakness of certain German commanders.

"It was then that the feuhrer, with his display of toughness, held the whole German front himself."

After recounting the hardships encountered in the Russian campaign, Goering attempted to bolster the German spirit with the assertion, "I am convinced that Russia is now using her last reserves."

Goering announced Hitler had ordered mobilization of all remaining resources of Germany.

Turning to what he called Russia's deception in the Finnish war, Goering said, "We had seen a small but gallant nation (Finland) fight heroically for many months against this vast empire and we thought 'what danger can possibly come from that empire in the east?'"

"It required all the hardships of last winter to realize that Russia's war against Finland was perhaps the cleverest, greatest camouflage in world history," Goering said.

"While the Russians had few armies fighting Finland with partly equipped obsolete arms that spent the last decade and a half building up the most powerful armaments which ever had been made by any nation."

The observation came from the man who long and often boasted Germany had the world's best and most powerful war tools.

The Russians were able to build up a vast military machine, Goering contended, "because their armaments were made not by a free people but by slaves . . . all Russians made nothing else. They had nothing to make life more beautiful."

Goering conceded, "it is not easy to fight Russia. Our enemy is hard, his leadership barbaric and disobedience means death."

The reichsmarshal said it was Hitler's celebrated intuition that dictated the Nazi attack on Russia.

"The strength of the Russians was known," he said, apparently contradicting other parts of his speech, "but the fuehrer's intuition warned him we must attack all the same."

The flags which gave Berlin and all Germany a gala air on previous anniversaries were ordered furled by Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels. The German radio, usually alive on Jan. 30 with bright music, happy tidings from the front and bombastic orations, was pouring out details of the new decree drafting all men from 16 to 65 and all women from 17 to 45.

A Moscow broadcast, quoting Stockholm advices, said Heinrich Himmler, Gestapo chieftain, had been designated general commissioner in charge of the new German "total mobilization" program.

The melancholy tone of the German press, which has been preparing the Germans for sorry news in recent days, was indicated in Stockholm dispatches quoting an article in the Frankfurter Zeitung.

Appealing to all Germans to get behind the war machine, the paper said "some must offer blood, others sweat," and added that "defeat would transform Germany into a museum such as Greece after the Roman conquest."

Fritz Sauckel was quoted in a DNB broadcast from Berlin as saying that "It's not Stalingrad, but the fact that the war is reaching a climax which has led to the mobilization of all Germans."

COUNTY GIVEN SOIL PLAN O.K.

Special Election to Be Held To Decide Conservation Project Here.

conservation district idea is going to do more than perhaps any other one element in saving our resources," he continued. He indicated that there had been some opposition to the plan in northwestern townships of Richland county, but the opposing element was not represented at the meeting.

Drake, Bromfield's farm manager, was chief spokesman for the Richland county group. He said some farmers he knew had adopted contour tilling without outside help but that in some instances this actually complicated the erosion problem.

Vance Clever told the committee he had "about all of the soil conservation problems" on his Springfield township property. With the aid of a CCC camp technician he detailed anti-erosion measures he had undertaken.

"We have ditches on our place that are too big to cross," Richard Arehart revealed, "and unless something is done soon, some of the fields will be practically useless."

By planting about 13,000 trees some years ago to combat erosion, H. C. Snyder said he was "coming along nicely now."

"Some might criticize this program during the war," Lockhart concluded, "but we propose a long-time program and we need it now."

LIMA —(UP)— Ohio may have any time it chooses, but the old town clock atop the courthouse here has its own. The clock, recently electrified, struck 177 times yesterday when it was supposed to announce 11 o'clock. It might still be striking had not the current been turned off.

It was given another trial when 12 o'clock came 'round, but was shut off again when it reached 13 strikes.

program. A reception for the national officer will be held on the mezzanine prior to the dinner.

Formal greetings from the Mansfield branch were extended to the assemblage at the luncheon today when Lieut. Kennedy of the Fifth Service Command, Fort Hayes, Columbus, explained the purposes and aims of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps. Mrs. Thomas Hoffman, vice president of the Mansfield branch, presented the greetings in the absence of Mrs. Charles Kuntz, president.

Music during the luncheon was furnished by the Treble choir directed by Mrs. W. J. Hazeltine and Rev. Martin W. Wappner, chaplain at the Ohio Reformatory, pronounced the invocation.

"The one and only purpose of the WAAC is to realease men for active combat," said Lieut. Kennedy. "The army has gone all-out for the WAAC and wants women in every branch of the service to release men for combat duty. Our big problem is to get enough recruits to fill this demand." The speaker is stationed in Mansfield one day a week at the WAAC recruiting station.

Visiting officers and state board members headed by Miss Justina Eich, state president and dean of women at Capital university, Columbus, arrived in the city yesterday afternoon for a board meeting prior to the conference. They were entertained by the Mansfield branch at a high tea at the Women's Club at 5 p. m.

Deans of various Ohio colleges along with other association leaders were in charge of the various discussion groups. Dean Irma Voight of Ohio university, Athens, will review the results of the individual conferences prior to adjournment this afternoon. Dean Helen Battrick of Akron university served as general chairman.

Local leaders for the group discussions were Mrs. R. A. Rowlands, chairman of arrangements, and Mrs. Dan Haber. Mrs. Rowlands conducted the discussion on social studies and defense while Mrs. Haber headed the discussion on art.

Music at tonight's banquet will be furnished by the Mansfield String trio composed of Mrs. E. D. Gibson, Mrs. Elsie Ireland and Ernest Schafer. Rev. Herman Gilbert of St. Paul's Lutheran church will give the invocation.

BRANDY GOING

Liquor Department Reports Ohioans Buying It Up.

COLUMBUS —(UP)— Keeping a bottle of brandy handy from now on is going to be mighty difficult.

State liquor department officials reported today that customers are rapidly buying up all the brandy on the shelves because it is in the same price range as most of the hard-to-get domestic whiskys.

State Director Don Fisher said the department was trying to get a larger supply delivered in Ohio, but that he may not be able to meet demand unless "raiding" practices can be stopped.

The liquor board recently forbade permit holders from purchasing liquor at state stores for re-sale, but as yet no means of enforcing the order has been found.

Patrolmen John Gilbert and Glen Adams said the court action was the culmination of a "neighborhood quarrel."

Boy "Recovered" — Patrolman Richard Hecht yesterday evening restored a seven-year-old boy to his sick mother who lives on Springmill street. When a neighbor girl notified police that the bedridden parent was worrying over the absence of her little son Hecht began a search of the neighborhood, finding the lad playing with some older boys on a nearby street.
